FROM THE EDITOR

As most members know, the August issue did not go out on schedule. After taking the August issue to the printers, we were informed that the new cost for printing had tripled. So, once again we had to find another source for printing to hold down the costs. We have been able to make new arrangements now and hope no more delays will be necessary.

We have found that many members of the society have no genealogy charts in their file. Anyone who still has not done so, please submit as soon as possible. These charts can always be updated at a later time, and researchers visiting our library will have access to surnames being researched. A happy holiday season to each and everyone!

INSTITUT DE RECHERCHES LES SOURCES DU PASSE ENR.

The following is a letter from Mr. Jean Prince regarding genealogical research by his institute: (September 2, 1986)

Just a few words to tell or remind you that our genealogical research center, created for U.S. researchers having problems in tracing their ancestral roots in Province of Quebec, Canada, would be happy to help your subscribers or members. The INSTITUT DE RECHERCHES LES SOURCES DU PASSE ENR would be able to give to ALL U.S. researchers genealogical research services ON THE SPOT there, either in the printed sources (marriage indexes, etc.) or in Vital, Church, census records or other records related to genealogy. Could you please talk about our services to the members of your genealogical society? More information about research services, fees and details could be obtained upon reception of a SASE from people interested. Despite our French name, the services would be given in English, of course. (B.P. 1293, Trois-Rivieres, Quebec, Canada G9A 5L2)

COURT HOUSE BURNED

From the Kankakee Gazette, Thursday, October 10, 1872

The court house of this county was discovered on fire about half past nine o'clock last Saturday morning, and as it soon became apparent that the fire would not be stopped, the work of removing the contents of the building active: commenced. All the books and papers in the vaults and the various offices, together with the furniture of the lower rooms, and the household property of the jailer, Sheriff Durfee, were safely removed, and then nothing was left but to witness the destruction of the building. The fire was discovered from the outside by smoke issuing from the dome. The circuit court was just closing its September term, and the discovery inside was made as some of the attendants were leaving the court room. Opinions differ as to the origin of the fire, some contending that a defective chimney flue was the cause, while others are strong in the belief of incendiarism. Suspicion rested so strongly on a man named Charles Beauman, who had been confined in jail for some time on a charge of an aggravated assault and battery, and who had been released the evening before on bail, that he was arrested during the progress of the fire. A long examination, however, before justices Coffin and Stiles, failed to elicit any proof against him, and he was discharged.

But whatever the cause, the fact of the fire remains; and another fact exists, viz. that anything like adequate means of extinguishment would have saved the building with perhaps the loss of the roof. For a long time the fire was progressing slowly between the roof and the upper ceiling. An engine and hose, or perhaps even a force pump and hose, would have been sufficient to prevent any extension of the fire, and ultimately have subdued it. We hear that several Babcock fire extinguishers, which had been procured by the county, had not been taken from their packing, and consequently even they were not available - not even a ladder which would reach the roof was obtainable, and hundreds of men who would have been willing helpers, were compelled to be idle spectators after the valuable contents of the building had been removed. How long this shameful neglect of an obvious duty is to continue, we cannot say; but surely it is high time that something should be done to protect the property in our midst. We believe something can be done, if a definite measure is presented before the effect of the present disaster passes away, and if our citizens will attempt to harmonize their views instead of embarrassing a specific proposition by interposing a conflicting one.

The fire left all the walls of the building standing, but so much injured, it is thought, that they must be taken down. The vault and four of the prisoner's cells were uninjured. Two of the cells were broken in. Only two prisoners were in confinement, one under sentence to the penitentiary. Both were removed, and guarded at the Exchange hotel.

The amount of insurance was $30,000, of which $10,000 in the Phoenix, $5,000 in the Hartford, $5,000 in Home, New York, $5,000 in the London, Liverpool and Globe, $3,000 in the Underwriters $2,000 in the North America. This insurance could not have been better placed.

The business of the county suffered little or no interruption. The county and circuit clerks, treasurer, school superintendent and surveyor are located in Swannell's one story brick block on Court Street, and the county judge and county attorney have found quarters in Sibley's block. The city hall or either

Knecht's or Swannell's hall can be easily prepared for a court room. A dwelling house belonging to Sheriff Durfee had been fortunately vacated a day or two previous to the fire, and he removed at once into it.

It is seldom a fire of this character has involved so little actual loss. The building itself was well insured, and the preservation of all the books and papers averts a calamity that even a partial destruction would have entailed.

THE AVENUE

Taken from The Kankakee Gazette, October 24, 1872

East Avenue, during the past season, has undergone a transformation that is well calculated to gratify the citizens of this place. Nine good, substantial brick buildings have been put up since the season opened. - All of them are constructed with a view to furnishing light, roomy and airy accommodations for merchants carrying large stocks of goods. No better store rooms are to be found in the city, and we hope to see every one of them occupied before six months have passed. The avenue, from presenting the dingy, tumble-down appearance of two or three years ago, has become a smart, cheery business thoroughfare, its buildings corresponding with the life and growth characteristics of our city.

The fires, in one respect at least, have been beneficial to us, and our city is fast passing from the condition of a hastily built railroad shipping point to the dignity and substantialness of a prosperous commercial centre.

Give us the river improvement, the Kankakee and Illinois (East and West) railroad, a reduction of freights north, south, east and west, and you will see Kankakee assuming a position among the cities of the State that will be felt all over the West. This sounds big, but it is far from being the most improbable thing ever uttered, and we trust the day is not far distant when our people will realize the full measure of their aspirations respecting our beautiful little city.

SCHOOL CENSUS

Taken from The Kankakee Gazette, August 20, 1874

Henry Paddock who has just finished taking the school census of Kankakee for 1874, furnishes us the following figures:

No. families with children	823
No. children under 21	2,586
No. children between 6 and 21	1,760
No. children between 12 and 21 unable to read or write	43

This is the largest census ever taken, and shows conclusively that the juvenile portion of the community is waxing stronger, at least.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Taken from The Kankakee Gazette, January 23, 1873

We have been at some trouble to glean the following statements showing the condition of the various Sabbath schools in the city, and we think that the amount of interesting information deduced from our inquiries is sufficient to warrant the time and space devoted to their preparation and publication, and to compensate the reader for their perusal. Our Sunday schools are institutions without which no community can profitably exist. Much of the high standard of integrity found among the business men of the day sprang from the germ implanted at the Sunday school. Many a man owes his exalted business and social standing to the church nursery, and few there are who do not believe in it as a necessary coadjuter to a healthy condition of the morale of a community. If from the subjoined report some of our church members are impressed with an idea of retrogression on the part of the school connected with the body to which they belong, let them take hold and contribute - as is clearly their duty under any circumstances - to its elevation; if others find in their school that which to admire and in which to take gratification, let them work to make it still more efficient in its peculiar and holy mission. Financially, our schools need assistance; money, in religious as well as secular affairs, is a powerful and essential element of success, and there is not a school in the city that if its financial resources were multiplied by two would not increase in membership, in attendance and in good results. Look after the children; they need all the helps to the attainment of godness that this or any other community can bestow.

The superintendent of this school reports favorably as to its condition - financial and otherwise. It is on a much better and more substantial footing than ever; its attendance during the past few months has increased, and the indications are that the 1873 will be one of greater prosperity than it has known for some time; the interest holds good, teachers and pupils taking hold of the work with vigor and determination; the Sunday collections are gratifying and promising; the library is new and receives additions as often as necessary, while the character of the literature is believed to be such as will instill correct principles in the minds of the children. The superintendent thinks he has an earnest school and an appreciative one.

A regular record is kept by teachers of the standing of each pupil based on attendance at school, lessons, deportment and attendance at church. Public reports are made of the relative standing of pupils in their class, and of classes in the school, at the "Quarterly Sunday School Service" held on Sunday evening following the close of each quarter. In numbers the Superintendent reports that the school is about the same as a year ago; but he thinks there are many indications that in the more important features of interest, preparation of lessons sense of duty, both in teachers and pupils, there has been a marked improvement in the year just ended. In the matter of singing, also, there has been a decided advance. The Superintendent praises the teachers and officers generally for their faithfulness, and says that the excellent condition of the school is due in a large measure to them.

A RESTING PLACE FOR HISTORY

How to Find Ageless Art in the Cemetery

Taken from the Chicago Tribune, September 5, 1986

Cemeteries may not be everybody's idea of good places to visit, but they do have some monumental attractions.

This Sunday, the Chicago Architecture Foundation begins its annual fall tours of Graceland and Rosehill cemeteries - two of Chicago's most historic final resting spots. Whether you take the architecture foundation tour or walk the gardenlike grounds of these or other area cemeteries on your own, you will find history is everywhere.

The garden cemetery was a peculiarly Victorian concept created in response to years of unsanitary, overcrowded burial conditions. Leaving the English countryside, workers gravitated toward the dense, urban streets and narrow back alleys. Burial space was so limited that graves often lay open, plundered by robbers. Indeed, it wasn't uncommon for more than a dozen coffins to be placed in a single grave. Poverty, disease and early death were so widespread that Londoners closed the city churchyards in 1855.

In 1850's Chicago, burial conditions were not much better. As typhoid and cholera epidemics increasingly claimed more victims, overcrowding in the city's lakefront public cemetery - 100 acres of land in what is now Lincoln Park -reached dangerous proportions. The situation was not alleviated until 1858, when cemetery neighbors and a local physician, Dr. John Rauch, urged that graves be moved to private cemeteries and the area declared a park. Only one grave was allowed to remain - the tomb of early hotel owner Ira Crouch, whose family successfully lobbied to retain the lone grave site at Stockton Drive near North Avenue.

The earliest municipal cemeteries were designated in 1835 but were segregated along religious lines. Thus, Protestants were buried on the North Side at Chicago Avenue near Michigan Avenue; Catholics, on the South Side near 23d and Calumet Streets. The first private cemeteries were Oak Woods at 1035 E. 67th St., founded in 1853; Rosehill at 5800 N. Ravenswood Ave., 1859; Calvary, 301 Chicago Ave., Evanston, 1861; and Graceland at 4001 N. Clark St., also 1861.

Renowned as much for its architecture as for its famous dead, Graceland is probably the most celebrated cemetery in Chicago. Works and sculptors Lorado Taft and Daniel Chester French are on public view. Buried here are politicians and philanthropists, architects and inventors, merchants and entrepreneurs. The list includes John Kinzie, the first permanent white settler in Chicago; Jack Johnson, the first black boxer to win the world heavyweight championship; George Pullman, inventor of the sleeping car; Louis Sullivan, Mies van der Rohe and Daniel Burnham, who literally built the city; merchant magnates Potter Palmer and Marshall Field; meatpacking baron Philip Armour; and Alan Pinkerton, the cooper from Glasgow, Scotland, who founded the legendary Pinkerton Detective Agency.

Originally 80 acres, Graceland acquired an additional 200 acres in 1861 that it planned to incorporate as burial ground. But residents of the area -then called Lake View - protested, calling further growth "pernicious to health and life itself". An ugly lawsuit was avoided when Graceland agreed to give up its unoccupied land in exchange for adjacent space on its eastern boundary and at its northwest corner. The cemetery now covers 119 acres.

Rosehill is Chicago's largest nonsectarian cemetery, with 330 acres, 25 miles of paved roads, 5 lakes and a total of 190,000 plots ("We're bigger than the Loop," jokes publicist Debbie Regal). It is the final resting place for a dozen mayors, including Levi Day Boone - nephew of Daniel Boone - and "Long" John Wentworth, whose 72-foot monument is the cemetery's tallest obelisk. In addition, a large number of the city's business elite are entombed in Rose-hill's 6,000-crypt mausoleum: A. Montgomery Ward, Richard Sears, James Scott Kemper, Milton Florsheim, John Shedd, Maurice L. Rothschild, Charles A. Stevens and Edward Swift.

Oak Woods is less known, but it served as a South Side burial ground for the wealthy from then-suburban Hyde Park and Kenwood. It is the principal resting place for Civil War casualties. A bronze figure of a Confederate infantry soldier, arms folded and hat in hand, stands solemn guard over the graves of 6,000 Confederate prisoners who died when a cholera and smallpox epidemic raged through their Camp Douglas prison camp.

Other cemeteries of historical interest include Forest Home in Forest Park (formerly German Waldheim), where the Haymarket "rioters" are buried; Cal Sag, the small, dilapidated final home of many of the Irish immigrants who built the Illinois and Michigan Canal linking Lake Michigan with the Illinois River; Holy Sepulchre in Worth, where Mayor Richard Daley is buried; and Calvary in Evanston, the resting place of James Mulligan, colonel of Mulligan's Brigade and one of Chicago's most flamboyant Civil War heroes.

Legends, ghost stories and tales are associated with several area cemeteries. Late-night encounters with "Resurrection Mary", the hitchhiking ghost who died in an automobile accident and now is said to haunt the Archer Avenue entrance of Resurrection Cemetery in Justice, have been reported since 1939. In 1918, 86 members of a circus troupe died when their train collided with a government train near Hammond, Indiana. They were interred in Woodlawn Cemetery in Forest Park in one of the Chicago area's biggest mass burials. The graveyard is said to be disturbed by the occasional cries of wild animals.

American cemetery design owes much to the Victorian proclivity for lavish funerary art. How one ended life was just as important as how one lived it. Inspired by their English cousins, wealthy Chicagoans bought spacious plots and families commissioned elaborate monuments in memory of their loved ones. Prominent landscape designers were brought in. Adolph Strauch, who landscaped Spring Grove Cemetery in Clifton, Ohio - then the most famous of America's garden cemeteries - served as a consultant for cemeteries in Nashville, Buffalo, Indianapolis and Hartford, Conn., and for Chicago's Graceland.

Native flora, trees and delicate shrubbery were planted. Swamps were drained and replaced with miniature lakes populated with ducks and geese. Winding paths led from marble tomb to marble tomb.

Many of the older monuments incorporate Victorian symbols of death - an obelisk or an urn, an open book, clasped hands. William Hoyt's monument in Graceland is a particularly expressive example of this. Three female figures embody the Christian virtues of Faith, Hope and Charity. One bears a cross, another an anchor and the third nurses a child. Equally emotional, William Kimball's tomb in Graceland offers a kneeling angel casting a doleful glance. Cherub-faced seraphs, chief emblem of immortality, adorn an otherwise forlorn gray slab.

Some of the best artists of the day, from sculptors Lorado Taft and Daniel Chester French to the architectural firm of Richard Adler and Louis Sullivan, designed funerary art. The Getty Tomb in Graceland, a memorial to the wife of lumber merchant George Getty, is perhaps the crowning jewel of Louis Sullivan's distinguished career. Not only was it declared a city landmark in 1971 by the Commission on Chicago Historical and Architectural Landmarks but it has also been described as "the beginning of modern architecture in America." Other notable architects on exhibit at Chicago cemeteries are George R. and Arthur R. Dean, (William McKibben Sanger monument, Graceland), practitioners of the English-based arts and crafts movement; Richard Bock (Lucius Fisher monument, Graceland), who collaborated regularly with Frank Lloyd Wright; and Leonard Wells Volk (Our Heroes: Civil War Monument, Rose-hill), one of the earliest sculptors to set up a studio but best known for the plaster casts he made of Abraham Lincoln's face and hands in 1860.

SYNOPSIS OF MEETINGS

July 12, 1986

We currently have 71 paid members. Because of the high cost of having the Portrait & Biographical Record of 1894 printed locally, we will check with Whipporwill Publications in Evansville, who published Tazewell & Mason Co.'s book. The program was a tape on U.S. Military Records & Pension Files.

August 2, 1986

The August meeting was a picnic at Bird Park.

September 6, 1986

We currently have 78 paid members. It was decided that we would have Whipporwill publish the Portrait & Biographic. Price will be $27.50 during pre-publication and $30.00 afterwards. We plan to have this book as well as the next cemetery book available before Christmas.
