IN MEMORY

We are sorry to report that long-time member Ann Voss passed away in February of this year. Ann worked very diligently for the society on many of our projects as well as serving on the Board. Our deepest sympathies are extended to her husband Charlie and other family members.

K.V.G.S. PUBLICATIONS & NEWS

The Norton Township Cemetery Book and Theakiki Index to Vol. 16-20 are now available. See back cover for purchase information. We have also sent to the bindery copies of the 1860 Kankakee County Census Book and S/S Peter & Paul Parish History. These should be back early in May and will be available at a cost of $25.00 each. Anyone wishing to have a copy shipped should include $3.00 postage and handling.

In May the society will be walking the old section of Mound Grove Cemetery in Kankakee. We hope to have that publications available sometime this summer.

The Society extends a special thanks to Phyllis Davidge for the donation of her book THE WARRINERS OF THE WEST OF NEW ENGLAND ORIGIN.

Nancy Kneer, Member #230, is trying to locate information on Hickey's Chapel. This chapel was mentioned in the obituary of one of her ancestors in 1924 and she'd like more information. They are no longer in business but what happened to the records? If you can help, write Nancy at 2977 E. 419th Rd., LsSalle, IL 61301

LEISER FURNITURE IN HERSCHER TURNS 100

Taken from the Herscher Pilot, Feb 6, 1992.

February 10, 1992, marks the 100th anniversary of the store built by Woolfe Leiserowitz. Had the Village of Herscher, then 10 years old, not already been named for its founder, the town may very well have taken on the name of Mr. Leiserowitz. Regardless, the first six letters of his name, and the name of Herscher, have grown to be synonymous over the past 100 years.

Mr. Leiserowitz, a Jewish immigrant was born January 16, 1866, in Shoven, Russia. Folklore has it that he earned his living as a pack peddler, walking from farmhouse to farmhouse selling his wares. He peddled his way to Herscher from Cullom in 1892. Cullom's loss was Herscher's gain. Leiserowitz established what is now by and far Herscher's oldest business. His original inventory in 1892 was so small he could use a wheelbarrow to transport stock from the nearby railroad depot.

One year later, his store would be robbed of its entire contents. But he would give us on neither his business nor Herscher. Within 10 years, he had built the two-story stone building next to the old Hipke Drug store. That building stands today. And on its north exterior wall, the old Leiserowitz name can still be read. The lettering on the building has withstood a century of every-changing mid-western climate. Likewise, the Leiser name has survived a century of ever-changing business climate. Mr. Leiserowitz and his wife, Minnie, had seven children. Four of them served in the armed forces during World War I.

Sons Mandel and Maurice carried the torch after Mr. Leiser's death in 1932 (by then the name had been shortened). Mandel and Maurice would likewise add their personal touch to the business. Maurice was the goodwill ambassador. In fact, he served as mayor of Herscher for 28 years. It's been said that Maurice dug into his pocket to pay village bills when the public coffers went dry.

Meanwhile, Mandel was a shrewd businessman who ensured that the family business would not only remain solvent, but flourish. Together they nurtured the business through depression, war, drought and, yes, prosperity.

In 1984, prior to his death, Maurice was honored at Herscher's Pilot Park where the baseball diamond was named Maurice Leiser Field. A street on the east side of Herscher has also been named after the family.

Bill, Mandel's son, now carries the torch. Bill blends the unique characteristics of his predecessors with his own traits which leave customers (a) laughing, (b) cursing, (c) surmising, (d) spending, (e) saving and (f) all of the above. Only Bill Leiser can lure a customer into his store with a $15 mattress ad, and send him home with an entire bedroom suite. And if the art of loading furniture into a car trunk was an Olympic event, Bill would have enough gold medals to buy Fort Knox. He is an ever-flowing fountain of Jewish jokes, farmer jokes and stock market tips. His eccentric quirks have woven their ways into the fabric of the business.

Being one of the community's more prominent families, the Leisers' many contributions to Herscher over the past 100 years have often been taken for granted. The Leiser family, since 1892, has made many civic and economic contributions to the community. Bill, now 57, plans to gradually pass the torch on to his sons, Eric and Ben. Eric just graduated from Eureka College and Ben is a student at Southern Illinois University.

QUARTERLY/NEWSLETTER EXTRACTIONS

How Do You Compute an Age or Birthdate of an Ancestor?

Use the "8870" formula given in the March 1976 issue of Genealogical Helper. Example: Using a calculator, enter 18890506, which represents the death date 1889 May 6, then subtract 710709, representing the age of the person 71 years, 7 months, 9 days. From the result of 1879797 you must now subtract 8870 to correct the months and days. You have 18170927 or 1817 Sep 27, the correct birthday. (Elgin Gen. Society Newsletter, February, 1989)

Quarterly/Newsletter Extractions (Contd.)

Civil War Veterans' Photos

If you have a photo of your Civil War veteran, the U.S. Army History Institute would like to hear from you. They would like to borrow the photo for copying. Their goal is to have a picture of every Civil War soldier, North or South.

The Institute will return your photo and a free 8 x 10 copy. Write before sending: Michael J. Winey, Curator, Dept. of the Army, U.S. Army Military Hist. Institute, Carlisle Barracks, PA 17013. REMEMBER: WRITE FIRST! (Iroquois Co. Hist. Soc. Newsletter, Nov./Dec. 1991)

Chicago Catholic Church Records

The church records for the Chicago Archdiocese have been microfilmed and are being released by the LDS Family History Library. The records can be found in the Local Catalog under Illinois, Cook, Chicago Church Records. The records can contain baptismal, confirmation, marriage, marriage banns and death records that are over 70 years old. Baptismal records include Christian name, surname, dates of birth and baptism, parents' names and places of origin, and godparents. Marriage records list full names of bride and groom, addresses, where baptized, or place of origin, age, parish, date of marriage, parents' full names and number of years they had been in America and in Chicago, and witnesses. Death records include full name, dates of death and burial, age, cause of death, length of illness, where born, number of years in America and Chicago, parents' names, family members, a reception of sacraments, etc.

Chicago Catholic history and family heritages are finally freed. Microfilmed copies can be ordered - $3.00 for a 3 week loan, $4.50 for six months, $4.50 a reel for indefinite loan. (North Central Illinois Gen. Society Quarterly, Vol. XIV No. 2)

Terms Then and Now

Stepmothers were sometimes called mother-in-law. Cousins could be relatives of any type, sometimes even close friends. Jr. written after a man's name did not necessarily mean a name the same as his father, it might be an uncle or older cousin. Housekeeper once meant property owner and could be used for a male as well as a female, Inmate as found in Pennsylvania Archives, refers to a man living in the home of another person, not necessarily in an institution. Freeman meant a young man not yet married. Domestic once meant housewife, not necessarily a servant. Mister was a title used only for men of wealth and/or education. Gentleman frequently referred to a retired man. (Logan Co. Gen. & Historical Society, Spring Quarterly, 1991)

'We're contacted when someone has died and heirs are being sought'

Name: Michael Susman

Background: Born in Chicago and raised in Elgin, Susman, 53, holds a degree in accounting from the University of Illinois and a law degree from Northwestern University. A resident of the Near North Side, he is a partner in the firm of Henry R. Ferris and Co., Genealogists.

Years as a probate researcher: 29

AFTER RECEIVING MY LAW degree in 1962, I joined a small firm specializing in an unusual type of probate practice. I represented foreign nationals who were involved in probate court cases in conjunction with their foreign consulates here in town.

Most of my clients were from the Soviet bloc countries, and at that time it was difficult representing them. There were communication problems, including the attitudes of the court system and other lawyers. I was a pariah of sorts, but I didn't mind that. I was working for individuals who were entitled to representation.

If someone died in Chicago who had heirs in Europe, it would be my job to locate them. It fit perfectly into the genealogical work that I eventually got into. Sometimes parts of the family would be located in England, France or some other country, and I would work with the attorney or genealogist who had located those heirs to establish their validity in the probate courts of Cook County.

Now I am hired more as a genealogist in probate matters by courts, trust companies or lawyers who are searching for heirs. They want me to present evidence sufficient for the court to establish heirship. Cases also come to us from lawyers who are looking for heirs and legatees. We're contacted by people from all over the world when they are aware that someone has died in Chicago and heirs are being sought.

There is no average length of time it takes to solve a case, and sometimes they're never solved. You know within a few months whether or not you can do it. If it goes longer, the chances of a solution are slim, unless you get very lucky.

To substantiate what you believe to be true—that these are the right people—takes a relatively short time. Gathering the proof to be presented in court takes much longer.

Fees may be on an hourly basis, or a contingent basis, which means we will get our fee from the individuals when we locate them. These fees are usually one-fourth to one-third (of the amount involved).

If we have to travel and spend a great deal of time, it's preferable to be paid at an hourly rate. We can usually solve the case 80 to 85 percent of the time.

When we're hired by a bank, we usually cull through the bank files. There's always a clue there. The bank personnel might miss it, not being as aware as we are. They supply information, but don't have the expertise to track people down.

We go to cemeteries, examining tombstones and records where they're available. Most cemeteries have fairly poor records, except for the recent past. We've gone back as far as the year of the Chicago Fire hunting for clues. There are few records prior to that. Generally, we're involved in cases that go back 30 to 40 years.

We have to be certain of the stripes—the lines of descent. In the case of two heirs where we can only prove one line, the estate is divided in half, with the first part going to the known heir. The other half is deposited with the county treasurer. There is no statute of limitations on it, so if the heir or descendants are ever found, they will be awarded the money by the court system.

It stays with the county for seven years, and then is paid to the State of Illinois, pursuant to the Abandoned Property Act, but it can still be claimed. Lists are published in newspapers regularly regarding funds that have been turned over by institutions.

This is a fascinating business if you enjoy solving puzzles. You find one clue, which leads to another clue, which leads to still another. The elation you feel when you fit in the last crucial piece of the puzzle is satisfying.

When I locate people who are entitled to a bequest, they all think I'm selling something until I convince them I'm there to give them money."

titled to a bequest and call them, they generally are reticent about discussing anything with me. They think I'm selling something until I convince them that I'm there to give them money.

Sometimes they don't believe me even then. I once had a woman who didn't believe me until the day I gave her a certified check, and it was for a substantial sum of money. Then I think she really believed me!

And some people are reluctant heirs for other reasons. A prominent New Yorker declined $100,000 because to claim it would have acknowledged that his grandmother was black and his grandfather a Spanish sea captain.

Recently I had a case from Vancouver involving more than $1 million. The caretaker of an incompetent person who had died knew of a tenuous connection with Chicago. What we found was that the deceased person's father had lived in Chicago in the 1920s and moved to Vancouver to escape creditors and some unsavory characters here. The sole beneficiary of this estate turned out to be a 94-year-old man who was a first cousin residing in California. I was afraid he would drop dead when he got the news.

When I finish a case, the heirs are usually very interested in learning more about their family tree. They may not have known about their family, or they had lost track of them for many years. They often request a copy of the genealogical chart that we prepared for the court, trust company or the bank that hired us. We're happy to give it to them.

What has surprised me the most about this business is how people will try to misrepresent relationships, because by disclosing the truth they might have to split the inheritance.

I was hired by a bank recently to investigate whether an adopted daughter had been readopted by the adopting mother's new husband. The law would then disallow her inheritance of an estate left by the original adopting father's father.

The daughter's sibling was a natural-born son who stayed with the father at the time of the divorce. He was receiving payments from his grandfather's estate. In questioning the mother, I learned that the son, too, had been adopted and had concealed that information. The mother also revealed that the daughter had never been readopted!

I immediately called the bank officer, advising him to stop payments to the son. We proved our case, and the daughter received her share of a $350,000 estate! ■

Chebanse - 1878

Taken from The Kankakee Gazette. May 23, 1878.

The festival for the benefit of the reading room netted $39.

Capen & Co.'s elevator caught fire from a locomotive spark last week, but three streams from the water works quenched the flames.

The Chebanse band are raising funds to uniform themselves.

Prof. Rowell is of the opinion that the tendency nowadays is to lower the grade and diminish the efficiency of the public schools.

May 20 - a new porch will be an addition to the Citizens Bank June 1st. It is now a National bank but will not be after the change.

This afternoon a Mr. Jebeau, a laborer at one of the warehouses, had the fingernails of his right hand torn off and the hand badly lacerated by the drag belt in the elevator.

Fred Schraeder's team, attached to a hayrack, ran away Friday afternoon on Main street, broke the tongue and badly demoralized the wagon and rack. Assault and battery suits are now ripening.

A number of our citizens will take advantage of the low excursion rates to Chicago this week and attend the Cary, Kellogg and Roze concerts.

The most beautiful hand-me-downs

Most fads, by their very nature, are close to worthless; a fad is something that comes quickly into style and then disappears almost instantly.

There's a quiet fad going on right now, though, that is quite wonderful. I'm not sure when it got started, but a lot of older men and women and their middle-aged children are well aware of it. This one deserves to last. This one deserves to become a permanent tradition in this country.

The fad—I'm going to stop using that word, because it diminishes what we're talking about—is the purposeful creation of written or oral histories by men and women in their 70s, their 80s and older. The purpose of these personal histories is to preserve the lives of the older people, to make the details of their time on Earth available to their descendants forever.

You're hearing more and more about this. For some reason, the idea of autobiographies has always been generally limited to famous people. The rule of thumb was that if a person's life was considered significant enough to warrant a contract from a publisher and space in a bookstore, then an autobiography was in order. Regular people need not apply.

That's wrong, though, and the world should have always known it was wrong. These new personal histories that are currently being written or spoken by older people all across the country will have much more resonance for the children and grandchildren of those men and women than any autobiography available for purchase in a store. And the beauty is in the particulars.

What makes these personal histories work is the specific memories of the individuals who write or speak them. There are mimeographed sheets that offer tips on how to construct the personal histories; the trick is for the older people not to attempt to sum up their lives in grand, sweeping, historic terms, but to stick to the seemingly small basics.

Thus: A man in his 70s shouldn't try to tell his children what post-World War I America was like; he should address himself to this question: "What did the house you grew up in look like?" Or: "Who was your best friend when you were a boy, and what did the two of you do together?" Or: "How did you get your first job, and what was it like on your first day?"

A woman in her 80s shouldn't try to sum up the political events of her youth. She should reach into her memory to answer questions on richer topics: "What was your schoolhouse like?" Or: "What do you remember about going for automobile rides with your family?" Or: "Describe what you would do on a summer day when you were a girl."

The idea of doing this is so perfect in its simplicity, it's almost startling that making this kind of personal history hasn't always been an American custom. When people die they are often able to leave property or money behind for their descendants, but this—a package of memories of a person's life—is what usually doesn't get handed down. The memories of the younger survivors are there, of course—grown children have vivid memories of their parents—but the older people's own memories of their worlds seldom get preserved, at least in the proper way.

The key to this is that older people had full, interesting lives long before their children were born. The children sometimes find that easy to forget; the personal histories are a way to recreate those vivid lives and make them available forever. And regardless of how fascinating the details are, ultimately they aren't as important as just having the stories, told in the parents' own words, there to read or listen to far into the future.

My own parents, who are in their 70s, recently surprised my brother and sister and me by presenting us with their own personal histories. My mother wrote hers; in a permanent folder I now have this elegant, moving story about a woman I knew and I didn't know—a woman who was living in this world well before she began defining herself as a mother. My father did his history on audiotape; beginning after World War I and continuing through the Depression and then on to Europe during his Army service in World War II, his story tells me things I never realized, and that he never would have thought to tell me had he not decided to embark on this project.

Histories like this—whether written, or spoken into a tape recorder, or, I suppose, recounted to the lens of a video camera—are not intended for the wider public to read or hear. They are for one family. And one by one, I hope families all over the country will begin to do this for each other. A life is not a fad; a life should be preserved with care and with love, while there is still time for the preserving.
