A WORD FROM OUR PRESIDENT

To us who are not professionals, genealogical research is an intriguing and interesting hobby. My dictionary defines a hobby as, "an engrossing topic, plan, etc., to which one constantly reverts; also, an occupation or interest to which ones gives his spare time."

The key words here, are "interest (or motivation)" and "spare time." I think you who read these words are already interested or motivated and of course my purpose is to try to assist you in continuing to maintain (or increase) your interest and/or motivation.

As with any hobby, each of us, according to our own resources, will be required to invest our time and money. But let us invest them wisely. A better topic would be, WHERE and HOW do I get help in my my genealogical effort?" The answer to this question is, "from other genealogists and as close as your telephone."

If you are not receiving Everton's Genealogical Helper, why use your spare time running to and from the Public Library to check their index for other genealogists working on the families in which you are interest, when you can pick up your phone, dial (815) 932-9307 and ask me to do it for you? If you do not have a copy for ready reference of the "Handy Book for Genealogists", do the same thing.

It has been suggested that each of make a listing of our personal holdings of publications and exchange or publish this listing so our members may make use of them in lieu of purchasing their own. I do not want to "play down" this idea, but I want to stress that YOUR greatest help will come from contacting a genealogist, by visit, by phone, or by letter. He or she will know their personal holdings of publications (and generally be too jealous of their spare time to list all of them), their contents, use, and limitations. The experience they have had in using them, will be passed on to you, by their advice and suggestions, and again YOU will save some of your spare time by making use of their experiences.

My own personal holding of genealogical reference books is rather small, about 4 textbooks, 10 or 12 pamphlets, 1 newspaper, and quarterlies from Everton, the NGS, ISGS, and our own Society. However, my document file (of secondary source material) has zerox extracts, of pages pertaining to my genealogical research, from approximately 100 other publications.

Once you have contacted another genealogist that is working on the same families in which you are interested, then YOU really start to hit, "pay-dirt," and your continued interest and motivation is assured.

200TH BIRTHDAY OF MAN WHO MADE FRANCE "POTATO-MINDED" NOTED

Contributed by Helen Nourie

(Editor's note: This article comes from a newspaper clipping with no date or name of newspaper.)

PARIS Oct 25 --(N. C.)-- A. A. Parmentier, the French Catholic pharmacist who made France "potato-minded" and put potatoes on every restaurant menu, was born in Montdidier in 1737 and this city, as well as others, has been celebrating the two hundredth anniversary of this "benefactor of France."

In all the ceremonies, as was logical, potatoes had a place of honor. This was so at Montdidier, where a Potato Exposition was held. Potatoes of all kinds were on display; also practical indications on how to prepare them in a hundred and one ways. There was also a "gastronomic pilgrimage to the site of the house where Parmentier first saw the light of the day. The original structure was destroyed during the war.

Another celebration was held in Neuilly, near Paris, where Parmentier had his first potato patch. Here his statue was decorated with flowers, and French fried potatoes were eaten joyously in his honor. A banquet was also staged, with potatoes dominating the menu. It started off with a potato soup and continued with a "Parmentier omelette," so named because of the inclusion of potatoes. And from then on, each dish was accompanied by potatoes in some form or other.

Parmentier was one of those savants who do not disdain to use their knowledge for the public benefit. He, it was who, against popular prejudice and indifference, caused the potato to be cultivated at a time when food of all kinds was scarce. His first experiments were carried out in the Plaine des Sabions, now forming part of Neuilly, and to encourage him Louis XVI (friend of Franklin and the monarch who recognized American independence went about with a sprig of potato leaves in his buttonhole.

Although his name is inevitably connected with potatoes, Parmentier was also a scientist of great merit. In 1800 under Napoleon, he became a general of the Sanitary Corp. He was an expert on nutrition, and in 1807, he prepared a pharmaceutical code. But to the average Frenchman, he is the man who made France potato-conscious, and that was an achievement of great utility.

During the Parmentier celebrations, the Montdidier Choral Society has been traveling about France, singing the glories of Montdidier, of

ENOCH HUNT I

Contributed by Mrs. J. H. Hicks

Enoch HUNT I was the first member of the HUNT family to come to America. He was born in Titenden, Parish of Lee, Bucks County, England about two miles from Wendover, England. He sailed on the ship "Diligent" which landed along the coast of Massachusetts Colony. His two sons, Ephraim and Peter were with him. No mention is made of his first wife but his second wife was Sarah BARKER. They had a daughter, Sarah, who was deaf and dumb. Enoch was made a freeman in Newport, Rhode Island in 1638. He was the owner of twenty acres of upland and three acres of saltmarsh as recorded in the records of Weymouth, Mass. in 1643. Shortly after he moved to Rehoboth, Mass. He returned to England and died there in 1650. He was a blacksmith by trade.

At a town meeting, June 1644, lots were drawn for a division of the woodland between the plain and the town. This area was first referred to as Seakunk, a name given to it by the Indians. Fifty-eight shares were drawn for the division of the town and Peter Hunt, Ephraim Hunt, Matthew Pratt, Thomas BLISS and Stephen PAYNE were among the ancestors who received shares.

In 1645 residents appealed to the Commission of the United Colonies and were incorporated by the scripture name of Rehoboth. Rev. Samuel NEWMAN, the real founder of Rehoboth, selected the name for he said, "The Lord hath made room for us.

This territory comprising the town of Ashfield, Franklin Co., Mass. was granted to Capt. Ephraim HUNT of Weymouth, as a compensation for services rendered in the Canada expedition of 1680. Until 1764 it was called Hunts-town but later called Ashfield.

Ephraim was the son of Enoch and his first wife and was born in England in 1610. He came to America as a refugee from the disastrous field of Marston Moore. The Puritans and the people of the important trading towns supported Parliament. The King Charles had nobility, gentry and clergy on his side. During the struggle, Oliver CROMWELL, called the man of the hour, became prominent. Cromwell's victories at Marston MOORE in 1644 marked the ruin of the king's cause. The King was beheaded and those who fought with him were hunted down and punished. Ephraim's real name was Col. Sir William HUNT, but to conceal his identity after his arrival in America, he changed it to Ephraim. Once an artillery officer and a dashing cavalier, he laid aside his fine dress as well as his title and became a quiet citizen. He was too noted a man to be overlookd and the search for him continued until after the Restoration. At the siege of York, Col. HUNT had been the hero of the day and the dignity of knighthood was conferred upon him by Prince Rupert. At the Battle of Marston Moore the tide of battle turned and Col. HUNT fled to America. A few months after he settled in Rehoboth he married Ann RICHARDS, an heiress. They had three sons. Ephraim died in 1686 from an epidemic which swept through the colony. He is buried near Soldier's Monument in Weymouth, Mass. on Burying Hill.

Peter Enoch II second son of Enoch was born in England in 1612. He lived first in Weymouth, Mass. and then went to Rehoboth. He was a very prominent citizen, having been chosen town clerk in 1649; deputy to the court at Plymouth fifteen times from the years 1654 to 1683. On December 9, 1659, it was agreed that he become an officer of the town of Rehoboth. He was a member of Plymouth Court as Deputy General; a member of the Council of War 1658 to 1685; and served in King Philip's War. He was witness to many deed and wills as recorded in Descendants of the Mayflower (which is indication that he was considered a very important, prominent citizen of the time). He was married to Elizabeth SMITH 10 December 1645. He died in 1692, being the father of 11 children.

MOMENCE OF THE OLD FRONTIER

Reprinted from TALES OF AN OLD BORDER TOWN AND ALONG THE KANKAKEE
HOSS-RACING DAYS IN OLD MOMENCE

In the old days on the Kankakee river there wasn't a sport, a game--anything in the way of fun--that could not be found at the pioneer settlement of old Momence. Talk about your "wide-open towns"--right here is where that popular term was "coined." Many of your so-called "wide-open" towns of today are merely cheap and tawdry imitations such as would pall on the spirit of a real, dyed-in-the-wool Momence resident of sixty years ago, and give him a pain and a feeling akin to nausea. The reader should take care to remember that Momence was one of the earliest settlements on the river in Eastern Illinois. Her history harks back to the early thirties--a good ways back when one ponders on it. The Indian was here for, at that time, he had just consented to yield his domain to the "Great White Father" and, in consequence had a three-year margin under the treaty to stay or go as he chose. Apparently, he chose to stay. Mingled with these aborigines were white hunters and trappers, Frenchmen mainly, in that early day, with now and then one from down on the Wabash, in Indiana. These men who have given substance to the nation's history invested it also with an indiscernible charm and color. These early-day men of the buckskin shirt and coon-skin cap, stood straight, shot straight and, above all other things, took their whiskey straight.

Although it is generally conceded that there is nothing to be said in favor of whiskey on the whole, there is one thing to be said in favor of this old-time whiskey of the frontier, and that is, while it sometimes left its patron with a large-sized headache, it did not make him crazy altogether, as does the doubtful product of today. Among the pastimes that found favor in the eyes of this picturesque assembly of frontier types, were the American game of poker, boxing, wrestling, foot racing and the like varied now and then by an honest-to-goodness fight. During the fifties and sixties, with the coming of the settlers, horse-racing became the dominant sport, and few there were within the immediate environs of Momence who did not possess a quarter or half-mile horse. Many of these horses in the vernacular of the frontier were rated as "right likely critters." Every Saturday there was a gathering of the clans at Momence to witness some special racing event. Following this main event, generally, would occur anywhere from ten to a dozen races matched on the spur of the moment between the owners of quarter and half-mile horses, who, cheered by the sport, and keyed to the point of optimism by generous drinks of whiskey, backed their favorites with all their worldly goods. Oh, there was nothing niggardly, no note of caution in the support these old-time boys gave to the "hoss" of their choice.

In that day of the late sixties, here and there a settler indulged in the luxury of a spring-seat for his lumber wagon. The spring-seat was viewed with envious eyes by those whose limited fortunes made it not only advisable but necessary to ride the "puncheon" board laid across the wagon-box. There was a lure to the spring-seat and, when the betting became brisk and spirited, a spring-seat served admirably as a final resource when the owner thereof had become reduced in ready funds. Many a spring-seat changed hands in those days on the result of a race. In consequence of this sporting proclivity on the part of early-day Momence citizens, the place was known far and wide by members of the sporting fraternity generally. For some years a gambler from the outside by the name of Manahan, made regular visits here. His specialty was poker.
Manahan was a squat, thickset individual with a benign and ingratiating personality. He wore invariably brown denim trousers, the legs of which were thrust nonchalantly into the tops of brown Morrocco leather boots, a la pioneer. For many years he successfully clipped dividends from the bank rolls of unsuspecting pilgrims after the manner of his kind.

One day, it may have been round about 1870, a rather seedy looking outfit consisting of a team hitched to a light wagon, drove into Momence from the south and stopped before the old stone saloon that adjoined the Central House. Hitched to the rear of the wagon was a little bay mare. The man in charge—well, there was nothing extraordinary about him except that he was a somewhat nervous temperament and had exceedingly sharp, gray eyes, deep set and obscured by heavy, bushed eyebrows. He made his way into the bar and called for whiskey in rather an ostentatious manner. He not only called for one but several whiskies within the space of a few minutes, during which he made it known by way of a general statement, to that effect, that he had a "hoss" that could do a quarter-mile so neatly and handily that he made most of his competitors look like they were anchored to the ground.

Of course, the crowd was interested on the instant, and of course, there were those who recalled that citizen Jake HESS owned what was conceded to be, the best quarter-"hoss" in all the country round about. Amid a good deal of stir and excitement, HESS was sent for, and, on his arrival, the crowd and the stranger moved out to where the team was standing and there in the harness, stood a little roan horse with harness marks deeply cut into the hair of neck and shoulders and sides. This animal, the stranger stoutly affirmed, could beat anything they had in a quarter-mile go, at least he had $250 that said so. HESS hurriedly took in the animal with his practiced eye, and then as hurriedly matched the strange for $250 a side. There was a perfect hubbub of excitement as the crowd moved on to the west side of town to that main east and west road which, for years had served as a track for these impromptu equine events. Arriving at the place the stranger peeled the harness from the roan and then announced that he would ride the animal himself, much to the surprise of the crowd. After some preliminary scoring the horses got away down the stretch, and, almost from the first the HESS mare ran away from her adversary. It was a pretty bad defeat; even the stranger was obliged to admit that.

There was great rejoicing, however, among the native population of Momence, whose sporting traditions thus remained unimpaired, and on the return of the crowd to town they sought out the old stone saloon, there to talk it over and drink a bumper or two to the health of the HESS mare. Meanwhile the stranger accompanied them. Apparently he was a good loser—one who was game all the way through. As he stood at the bar with HESS he talked volubly and paid a handsome tribute to the performance of the HESS mare. "Why," said he, as he put down the glass, "that hoss of yourn got up and humped himself jest like a skeered ghost ahead of a streak of double-gereed lightnin". I ain't never been so beat in sizin' up a hoss in all my life! You won all right, mister—you won!" There was another round of drinks. The crowd found the situation much to their liking. The owner of the victorious horse felt a delightful glow that had the effect of deepening the pink in his cheeks and caused the moisture to stand out comfortably on his foxvhead. He was conscious, also, of any increasing chest expansion as the merits of his horse were so generously acknowledged.
by the vanquished.

Altogether the situation was opportune, auspicious, although with our deeper knowledge of the mysteries of psycho analysis, it would have been spoken of in this day as the "psychological moment," one that a person with dark, ulterior motives, would have seized upon quickly and with confidence. That the stranger was adept in sizing up just such situations there can be no doubt. Very much to the surprise of everyone present, he proposed another trial of speed with the HESS mare and the little bay mare that followed demurely at the tail of the wagon. "I'll lay five hundred on her," said he, "with just one condition, and that is she be permitted to run the heat without any rider whatever!" The crowd gasped. Could he mean it? Surely the whiskey he had partaken of had gone to his head! HESS snapped at the offer amid the applause and congratulations of the onlookers. The money was put up, and again the crowd repaired to the track west of town.

There is a different tale we have to tell concerning this second trial of speed. It is a tale in which there is no element of joy or pleasure for such as risked their money on the local horse. There were things that took place at that second race of which the sober second-thought and judgment of the crowd took no note until long after it was too late. Most notable among the things that happened—that incident which, perhaps was most significant of disaster—was when a stranger mounted to the top of the nearby "stake-and-rider fence" and, opening a large leather bag, containing money, announced that he was then and there prepared to lay any amount on the riderless horse. Even then the crowd asked no questions but surged about the mysterious stranger as he stood on his precarious perch, and registered many a bet of five or ten or twenty, and not a few larger amounts than that. Our informant, as he pictured the scene in his mind's eye, remarked: "I kin see 'im yet." Hence you may know, dear reader, that this individual was a real entity and not a fabrication.

The horses, for sometime in readiness for the race, were held in abeyance until the betting populace had been duly accommodated. As for the race itself, there is not much to be said. It was short, sharp and decisive—especially the latter. The demure, docile little mare that followed the tail-end of the wagon, meek and lamb-like, was a whirlwind. Nothing less would have done her justice. She crossed the mark lengths ahead of the HESS mare and, at a word from her master, slowed down and turned and trotted up to him and then the crowd knew that she had been trained to the business. And by that sign, too, they also realized that they had been most artistically "flim-flamzed."

There was a good deal of liquor consumed by that crowd on their return to the old stone saloon. Tradition has it that each fellow bought his own. Those who could not buy, "stood-off" the bar-tender. They who could neither "buy" nor stand-off" the "barkeeper," endured the pangs of pitiless drought amid a gloom which resembled that in "Muddville," after the mighty Casey had struck out. Tradition further insists that this was the most complete and artistic "skinning" ever perpetrated on a sporting community in all the history of Kankakee county. Days after it was recalled that the man with the seedy looking outfit and the mysterious stranger with the bag full of money worked with feverish haste, and within a few minutes after the race were hitting the highway north out of town. The last ever seen of the seedy looking outfit it was still moving north over the highway and, lo and behold, there sat in the seat with the driver, the now familiar form of the erstwhile mysterious stranger, holding on his knees and hugging closely an old leather bag whose sides bulged with a goodly quantity of Momence "Kale." And, apparently, these two were not strangers.
