WOODMEN BANQUET MONDAY EVENING

Install Officers and Honor Member and Family Soon to Move From This Neighborhood.

Members of Cabery Camp No. 1520, M. W. of A. and their families gathered together at the Woodman hall Monday evening for fun and festival, to install officers and to give a farewell reception to Neighbor Frank McGinnis and family who expect soon to leave for Kankakee to make their future home.

After the installation of officers, the evening was given over to a good time. Cards amused some of the crowd. The first floor of the hall was made use of by the young folks in dancing, and the older folks had a good time as well.

The supper was prepared by the ladies of the company and needs no introduction. There was oysters, sandwiches, cake, coffee—and other good things to eat. More than 125 persons did ample justice to the spread.

The family who is soon to leave this community is of the substantial kind, whose removal is a loss and although their many friends and neighbors will regret to have them go, yet they will wish them health, happiness and prosperity.

Mention was made in the Enquirer last week of the sad death of Mrs. Arthur Gebhardt and infant son.

Interment was in Mt. Hope cemetery. The following young men acted as pall bearers: Charles Pastorel, E. E. Olson, Clarence Olson, W. H. Sadler, William Correct and Paul Knittel.

Obituary.

Lucille Magetha Keeler, daughter of Daniel W. and Laura E. Keeler, was born near Mokenca, Ill., Sept. 25, 1893. She was left motherless at the age of thirteen, just when a mother can be of the greatest of help. But Lucille was not one to be daunted by difficulties. She earned most of her expenses while preparing herself for her chosen occupation, and for four years she had taught acceptably in the schools near Cabery. On account of her early struggles with troubles she learned to suffer without complaining and her last illness called forth no murmur of complaint. Six years ago this month she was converted and united with the First Methodist church of Kankakee. On November 4, 1914, at Ottawa, Ill., Miss Keeler was united in marriage to Arthur Gebhardt of Cabery, where the young people made their home.

Mrs. Gebhardt departed this life January 2, 1917 at 10:55 P. M. following the birth of a son, which preceded her in death at 3:45 P. M. She leaves a father, three brothers, and husband, with a host of relatives and friends.

Expression of Thanks

We desire to express our sincere gratitude to the many friends and neighbors for their acts of kindness offered us in our hour of bereavement, also for the beautiful floral offerings.

FURORE IN COUNTY TREASURER'S OFFICE

Ford County Supervisors Meet to Receive Auditor Sims' Report
and C. L. King's Resignation

(Paxton Record, Jan. 6.)

The report of S. E. Sims, expert accountant, was read by the county clerk Friday afternoon. A general discussion of the matter of the report on County Treasurer ensued and lasted for several hours Friday and today. Deputy County Treasurer Murray Hunt appeared before the Board and made a detailed statement regarding his connection with the office during the past two years. He said that when he went into the office he had no intimation that anything was wrong and that he worked there for about three months before he discovered that the cash was not on hand as shown by the books; that immediately upon discovering the facts he put the matter up to Mr. King, the treasurer, and that continually, from time to time on, he endeavored, to the best of his ability, to have the matter straightened up. He stated that he had kept all the books of the office during the period covered by the report and that they tallied to a cent and that during this present term not a cent was missing. He blamed himself for not reporting the shortage to the Board, but stated that he was able at all times to be absolutely certain that no one outside of the immediate families of the officers involved was liable to lose a cent.

Friday evening Mr. Sims was asked to appear before the board and to read his report, and this morning he appeared, and the following is the paragraph covering this matter as reported by him and adopted by the Board:

"In addition to the above balances, two deposit tickets issued by the Paxton State Bank show that on Dec. 1, 1916, there was deposited in said bank to the credit of C. L. King, County Treasurer, the sum of $7,661.60, which amount included with the sum of the balances as just shown above, makes the total amount of cash on hand and in bank $22,178.37. One of the deposit tickets above referred to showed that the sum of $5,851.15 was deposited by John H. Nelson, the other that the sum of $1,810.45 was deposited by C. L. King. The pass book issued by the bank in question to Mr. King as County Treasurer shows that the total amount of such two tickets, viz: the sum of $7,661.60, was deposited in said bank on Dec. 23rd, 1916."

At 11 o'clock the Board adjourned to meet at 1 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon to act on the resignation of Mr. King and appoint his successor.

Mr. Sims stated to a Record reporter this morning that the reason he did not ascertain the bank balances two years ago was because Mr. King had just taken the office and had given to Mr. Nelson, his predecessor, a receipt for the full amount of cash which should have been on hand, amounting to $29,168.33, and that he had given an ample bond to the county which covered that amount; that he was not examining Mr. King's books at that time but was examining Mr. Nelson's books, and that they were correct to a cent.

GERMANS LAUD U. S. AMBASSADOR

Gerard Likened to Dove of Peace at Berlin Banquet.

TOAST KAISER AND WILSON

American Envoy Eulogized for His Efforts in Maintaining Friendly Relations of the Two Countries.

Berlin (by wireless), Jan. 9.—The dinner given on Saturday night by the American Association of Commerce and Trade of Berlin in honor of James W. Gerard, the Ambassador to Germany, who has just returned to the German capital from a visit to the United States, developed, and apparently with intention, into a demonstration of the good feeling entertained in the higher government circles and banking and business spheres toward the United States.

The guests included three ministers, two former ministers, the vice president of the reichstag, the heads of Germany's big financial institutions and other leaders in German public life.

David Wolf, president of the American association, who presided, was flanked on the right by Ambassador Gerard and on the left by Reinhold Sydow, Prussian minister of commerce. In all, 175 guests, about equally divided between Americans and Germans, were present.

The toasts to Emperor William and President Wilson were drunk standing. President Wolf introduced the principal speakers of the evening, Vice Chancellor Helfferich, Director von Gwinner and Mr. Gerard.

The ambassador's speech was informal and avoided touching contentious topics, but he mentioned the large contributions now being received from America for the relief of German widows and orphans and for other non-partisan works of mercy.

Arthur von Gwinner, director of the Deutsche bank, too, did not speak from manuscript, but Doctor Helfferich, speaking as the representative of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, delivered as set address, which was followed with the closest attention by the guests.

In all the speeches the cordial relationships existing between the governments of the United States and Germany were emphasized, says the Overseas News agency.

Director von Gwinner, who was likened by Director von Gwinner to the "peace dove of Noah's ark," is quoted by the Overseas News agency as saying that "never since the beginning of the war have relations between Germany and the United States been so cordial," and that he had "brought back an olive branch" from President Wilson.

Vice Chancellor Helfferich said he was pleased to know that Ambassador Gerard had visited the United States, "where he had opportunity of describing the real state of affairs in Germany," and Foreign Minister Zimmermann declared he "felt sure the friendly and trustful relations between both countries as enunciated by Mr. Gerard will continue."

A telegram expressing the "sincerest wishes" of the association "in this crucial time" was sent to President Wilson and another message was forwarded to Emperor William.

German U-Boat Sinks 11 Ships in Bay of Biscay.

Berlin, Jan. 9, by wireless.—An admiralty statement published on Sunday in connection with the announcement of the safe return of the German submarine U-46, which had been reported sunk in the Bay of Biscay, says that a German submarine, number not given, has sunk 11 entente steamers in 11 days. Of this number five vessels, totaling 15,000 tons, were laden with coal and bound for France and Italy.

New York, Jan. 5.—Juan T. Burns, Carranza consul here, was arrested on Wednesday, charged with being concerned in a conspiracy to ship arms and ammunition to Vera Cruz in violation of President Wilson's embargo proclamation of October, 1915.

Three indictments have been brought against Burns, it was learned. Aside from the alleged conspiracy to violate the president's proclamation, the defendant is accused also of deceiving the customs authorities by falsely manifesting ammunition shipments as hardware.

The arrest, made by special agents of the department of justice, is the outcome of a raid on the offices of an importing and exporting company operated here recently by Mexicans and of the arrest subsequently of a man named Rouben Mier at Houston, Tex. Mier formerly was employed here in the Mexican consulate.

Burns, who was arrested as he was leaving his home, was taken to the federal building and held in $10,000 bail.

SENATE INDORSES U. S. PEACE POLICY

Senator Lewis Says America Will Get Into War.

URGES SUPPORT OF WILSON

Illinoisan Declares if Conflict Continues This Country Cannot Remain Neutral—Vote on Resolution 48 to 17.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Senator Jones' substitute for the Hitchcock resolution indorsing President Wilson's peace note, which approves the request for peace terms without indorsing the note itself, was passed on Friday by the Senate.

The vote was 48 to 17. Progressive Republican senators voted solidly with the Democrats for the substitute.

Speaking in the senate in support of the Hitchcock resolution to indorse President Wilson's peace note, Senator Lewis (Dem.) of Illinois asserted that the European war could not continue without the United States becoming involved in it.

Senator Lewis said that the temper of the American people would brook no apology or excuse for further destruction of American life, but "would resent and punish to the full extent of America's power."

"The very debate in opposition to this resolution," Senator Lewis said, "has done more injury to the cause of peace to which President Wilson has sought to give impulse and force than any other form of opposition that has arisen from any other source in all the United States."

"The opposition to this resolution also will be construed abroad as an indication on the part of this body as an expression of such partiality for one belligerent against the others that we are content to continue the war merely for the object that it would beat down to destruction one of those belligerents and exalt the other to exultant victory."

NAME TUMULTY IN 'LEAK' CASE.

Congressman Wood Also Involves President's Brother-in-Law.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Smoldering rumors that somebody made money in the stock market with "leak" information about the sending of President Wilson's peace note blazed up at a sensational session of the house rules committee on Friday, when its first hearing on Representative Wood's resolution for investigation was held. Specifically declaring he made charges against no one and was presenting only information that had come to him, Wood brought in the names of Secretary Tumulty, "Mr. Bolling," a brother of President Wilson's wife; Bernard Baruch, a New York stock operator; Otto H. Kahn of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; Thomson & McKinnon, Chicago brokers; Lamson Brothers & Co., Chicago brokers; W. E. F. Hutton & Co., New York brokers; F. A. Connolly & Co., a Washington brokerage house in which Wood said "Mr. Bolling" was a partner.

Wood disclaimed intending to give the impression that he believed Mr. Tumulty or anyone else for that matter, profited from the so-called leak.

All the persons named at the hearing denied knowledge of the president's peace note until it was published.

SUICIDE OF MILLIONAIRE SOLVES MODEL MURDER

Death of Son of Rich Coal Magnate Ends Search for Friend of Sizin Girl.

Philadelphia, Jan. 6.—Bernard W. Lewis, the young Pittsburgh millionaire who was being sought on a charge collateral with the murder of Matzie Colbert, the model, committed suicide on Thursday at Atlantic City.

Lewis, traced to the very threshold of his suite by detectives, delayed their admittance with conversation. He shot himself with a .22-caliber rifle just as the doors were battered down.

The bullet entered the temple and death was instantaneous. That Lewis anticipated arrest and made preparations to kill himself is indicated by the fact that the rifle was new.

Although the detectives do not charge Lewis with the murder, they declare that his was the collar found in the beautiful model's rooms. A woman, who saw Lewis Friday night, identified it, they assert, by a spot and the fact that it was slightly wilted in front.

Lewis was thirty-seven years old, a Yale graduate of 1901 and a member of the Union, Pittsburgh County, Oakmont and Pittsburgh Automobile clubs. He was married but had been estranged from his wife since last November. He was well known among the devotees of the night life.

WILSON HAS PEACE TERMS?

Former Hungary Premier Tells Allies to See U. S.

London, Jan. 5.—President Wilson now knows the peace conditions of the Teutonic allies and the entente powers can learn what they are from him, Count Julius Andrássy, former premier of Hungary, is quoted as saying in a dispatch from Budapest, according to the Central News agency, by way of Amsterdam.

Washington, Jan. 5.—In the senate debate on Wednesday on the Hitchcock resolution to indorse President Wilson's peace note Senator Lodge attacked the German ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, for giving out a newspaper statement publicly approving the note.

"It is hardly to be wondered at, with such a statement as that from the German ambassador," said Senator Lodge, "that there should be general misinterpretation of the note, a general belief that it was designed, and timed so as to help Germany in attaining a peace upon the terms she desires to impose."

HIGH MEN INVOLVED

LAWSON CHARGES CABINET MEMBER AND SENATOR ARE INVOLVED IN NOTE "LEAK."

REFUSES TO REVEAL NAMES

Boston Broker Berates Members of Congress During Hearing Until Shut Off by Chairman—Wilson Exonerates Secretary Tumulty.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Describing it first as a suppositious case, but later stating it had been told to him as a fact, Thomas W. Lawson in his testimony before the house rules committee on Monday pictured a United States senator, cabinet officer and New York banker having a joint stock gambling account and dividing the profits among them. He declined to give names, because he did not know them of his own knowledge.

"Was it a case within your personal knowledge?" asked Representative Garrett. "I don't want to ask you for hearsay."

"I appreciate your attitude," answered Lawson, "and I meet it by saying that I might explode many sensations if I desired. I don't think this has reached the stage for giving names. It is not within my personal knowledge."

"Did the person who told you claim to have knowledge?"

"No, but I corroborated it later, and had a reputable banker, a friend of mine, and friend of the banker, go to see this banker. He mentioned this matter and said, 'What do you know about it?' He said the banker told him that he not only had this account, but others, and that he had this cabinet member under such absolute control that he could bring the cabinet member from Washington to New York or to the telephone at any time of the day or night, and he offered then and there to call him on the telephone to demonstrate it. Now I am sorry to have gone that far."

President Wilson added his indorsement to Secretary Tumulty's denial of any knowledge of a Wall street "leak" in connection with the peace note. Mr. Tumulty appeared before the house rules committee and made a statement reiterating that he had no knowledge of the note until it had been given to the press, and concluding:

"I am authorized by the president to quote him as follows:

"I wish in justice to Mr. Tumulty to say that he has stated the exact fact. He had no knowledge of the note whatever until it was given out for publication."

Secretary of State Lansing was also before the committee. He said that on the morning of his conference with the newspaper men about the peace note, three other men were present waiting to see him but that he did not know they were in the room until after he had talked to the newspaper men.

"Who were these men?" asked Representative Lenroot.

"Mr. A. E. Snowden of New York, E. R. Gayler, a civil engineer of the navy, and Dr. N. T. McLean of the navy," said Mr. Lansing. "The two naval officers were about to proceed to Haiti for the government."

"It is not likely that they would say anything about your statement?" suggested Representative Bennet.

"Very improbable."

Mr. Bennet recalled Secretary Lansing had stated he never speculated in the market and added:

"For that reason isn't it possible that you gave little thought to the effects a statement made by you might have on the stock market?"

"I never gave it a thought," said the secretary. "It never entered my mind. I was merely anxious to preserve the courtesy due to foreign nations in the matter."

Mr. Snowden issued a statement at New York and denied that he was responsible for the "leak."

Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, who originated the now famous charges of an alleged "leak" to Wall street of the sending of President Wilson's peace note, was called to the stand by the house rules committee.

Lawson charged that official Washington is "literally honeycombed with leaks."

"There are leaks in the Supreme court of the United States, in congress, in the cabinet and direct from the White House," he declared.

"There has been a gigantic robbery of the American people—a deliberate, premeditated robbery of the American people."

"Can you give us the names of anyone who profited by the leak?" asked Chairman Henry, before Mr. Lawson quit the stand.

"Did you say 'can' or 'will?'" inquired Lawson.

"I said 'can,'" responded Henry.

"I can, but I won't," answered Lawson. "I might have profited myself."

Ten Billion Tons of Coal.
The Nenana coal field, Alaska, will be tributary to the government railroad now under construction from Seward to Fairbanks. Though the coal of this field is lignite and hence of low grade, yet it has great value as a source of fuel and power for Fairbanks and other Yukon placer camps. The field is about sixty miles south of Fairbanks. It is estimated by the United States geological survey, department of the interior, that the Nenana field contains some ten billion tons of lignite. The Nenana coal field lies in what is known as the Bonfield region, which also contains some gold placers that have been mined in a small way for the last ten years.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.—Adv.

GOVERNOR LOWDEN DELIVERS ADDRESS TO THE ASSEMBLY

Inaugural of New Executive Discusses the Needs of the State.

BUDGET SYSTEM IS FAVORED

Consolidation of Administrative Agencies,
Conservation of Resources,
Supervision of Private Banks,
Other Reforms Urged on Legislature.

Springfield, Jan. 8.—Gov. Frank O. Lowden today delivered to the general assembly his inaugural address. It was as follows:

To the Members of the Fiftieth General Assembly:

In obedience to custom, I now submit to your consideration some observations of a general nature, which I deem pertinent at the present time.

The party to which a majority of both Houses of the General Assembly and I belong, at the convention held in Peoria in September, adopted a constructive program, clear and definite in all respects. This program was the basis of our campaign. It must be carried out in good faith if we wish to retain the confidence of the people. Party pledges must be held as sacred as obligations incurred in other fields. The time is past when one rule of ethics applies to an individual's word and another to a political party's word. If parties are to survive.

No form of government is an end in itself. Unless a government ministers generally to the well-being of the people, it will surely fail. Our fathers believed that the well-being of society would be best subserved by a democratic form of government. They therefore established that form of government. This imposed heavy responsibilities upon the people and those responsibilities were—first, to govern honestly; second, to govern wisely; third, to govern efficiently. Upon the whole, the people have governed honestly. In the main, the people have acted wisely, so far as they have acted at all. It remains to inquire whether or not we have governed efficiently.

Need for a Budget.
Our present method of appropriations is a vicious one. The head of each office, board, or commission prepares his own estimate of appropriations. His responsibility is limited and his outlook is narrow. He is not likely to be sparing in his requests. He very often asks for more than enough and he usually gets it. His estimate is made without reference to the necessities of other departments and without reference to the income of the state.

The estimate is referred to the appropriations committee, which grants a hearing. That committee is without the time, means, or opportunity for adequate investigation. It exercises its best judgment, but it must, of necessity, usually take the estimate of the officer, and generally passes his appropriation, which may be too much as compared with the necessities of other departments or with the income of the state.

I am in favor of a budget system. The system means intelligent, statewide planning. It calls for the creation of a finance department of the state government. The head of this department should have the power to establish a uniform system of book-keeping and to inquire into the necessary expenses of every agency of the state. He should be required to eliminate waste and extravagance and duplication of expense. Then a budget could be prepared and the governor could submit to the general assembly not merely the estimates of the different departments, but those estimates after they had been reduced to the irreducible minimum. He would thus be able, for the first time since the adoption of our present constitution, to comply with the constitutional mandate that he shall "at the commencement of each regular session, present estimates of the amount of money required to be raised by taxation for all purposes." Two fundamental principles are involved in the making of a state budget. The first is that the budget must be made by the executive, who is chargeable with the expenditures of the government, and the second is that it must be made so as to fix the responsibility for increased expenditures. After the governor submits to the general assembly his budget, the responsibility for increase is fixed upon the legislature.

Consolidation of Agencies.
One of our gravest problems is the constantly increasing cost of government. This fact is causing thoughtful citizens to pause and reflect. They are beginning to ask themselves the reason for this rapid increase. Some of the increase is inevitable. Population and wealth have vastly increased. But the state has become more complex. Its sphere of action has been increased. Latent powers have been invoked, and it has assumed larger functions. The police power has been extended, and state regulation and control of matters pertaining to the public health, welfare and safety has assumed wide and extensive proportions. Possibly there has been an excess of regulation. No occupation, trade or employment has escaped. A great mass of legislation, much of it ill-considered, has been enacted. The time has come to take an inventory of what has been accomplished, to retain the good and to discard the useless and impracticable.

Administrative agencies have been multiplied in bewildering confusion. They have been created without reference to their ability, economically and effectively, to administer the laws. Separate boards govern the penitentiaries, the reformatories, and the educational institutions. Several boards and commissions have charge of matters affecting the agricultural interests. Administration of laws affecting labor is parceled out among numerous agencies, including several boards having jurisdiction of mining problems and several free employment agencies, each independent of the other. Our finance administration is chaotic, illogical and confused. The administration of the health laws is divided between boards and commissions, with no effective means of co-ordination. Our educational agencies are not harmonious. Over one hundred officers, boards, agencies, commissions, institutions, and departments are charged with the administration of our laws. No systematic organization exists and no adequate control can be exercised. Diffusion, rather than concentration and responsibility, mark our system.

One of the imperative needs of the state is the consolidation of its multiplied agencies into a few principal departments. The governor is held responsible for the conduct of the state government. His executive functions should be discharged through a limited number of agencies over which he may exercise actual control. Under the present system of confusing perplexity, the governor cannot exercise the supervision and control which the people have a right to demand. I expect, within a few days, to submit a special message covering this entire subject in greater detail.

Efficiency in administration is dependent not only upon the responsibility of public officials, but upon a highly trained and capable force of employees in harmony with the principles of efficiency. It is essential, therefore, that the civil service law should be strengthened and extended.

Constitutional Convention.
The time has come for a new state constitution. The constitutions framed since the Civil war, including our own, have not been limited to those things which properly constitute the fundamental law of the state, but have contained many matters which are properly the subject of legislation. Their framers sought to take power from the legislatures and to legislate, themselves, through the constitutions. They labored under the delusion that they could shackle the legislature for all time. They were wrong, as we now plainly see. To withhold necessary power from a public official because he may abuse it, is to confess the failure of our form of government. Legislation always depends upon existing conditions, and conditions change. A constitution which seeks to legislate will inevitably be outgrown. This is our situation today.

There are many changes needed in our organic law, but I shall not take time to enumerate them. There is, however, one subject to which I want particularly to call your attention. Students of our government have gradually come to the view that we must have fewer elective offices, if democracy is to be made workable and efficiency attained. Diffusion of power does not safeguard against official abuse, as was once thought, but only disguises it. Responsibility must be concentrated so that the people may know who it is to blame if that responsibility is not met, but the short ballot is impossible under our present constitution.

And let it be remembered that the short ballot is not an innovation. It is but a return to the form of the Federal Constitution, and that constitution reposes all of the executive power in a single individual and provides, on the executive side of the government, only for the election of a president and a vice president. The need for this reform was never so great as it is under our present primary election laws. The people will not take the time to consider the qualifications of the past number of candidates upon whom they are compelled now to pass. Their minds are centered upon few officials and they ought to have the right, when they have selected those officials, to hold them responsible for the administration of their affairs. Therefore, I strongly urge prompt adoption by the general assembly of a resolution calling a constitutional convention.

Conservation of Resources.
The rapid industrial development of our state in recent years has distracted attention from our agriculture. The fact remains that agriculture is our most important industry; it was the source of our greatness, its continued success is the condition of our permanent prosperity within our borders. One of the great movements of our time is the movement for the conservation of our natural resources. A young nation, with the virility of youth, we have lived until recently as was natural, in the present. We have gone on as if the world were coming to an end when we were dead. Now we are getting a better perspective.

The conservation movement, as was natural, was at first most conspicuously identified with the conservation of our forests and our water power. But it must extend beyond the forests and water power. It must more immediately concern itself with the conservation of the soil, for even our brief history tells us that fertile fields may become abandoned farms through other causes than lack of rainfall. The Mississippi valley has been called the granary of the world, but if our agriculture in the future shall be no better than during the past, it is but a question of time when the Mississippi valley will be dotted with abandoned farms.

The raising of live stock seems necessary if we are to preserve the fertility of the soil. We should foster this industry in every way we can. We should encourage co-operative farming. Wherever you find agriculture in its highest state, you find that co-operation has made its greatest advance.

I have spoken before of the grouping of the agencies of the state into departments. A department of agriculture thus created, with a competent and practical man at its head, would be of incalculable benefit to the tillers of the soil. It could keep in vital touch with the farms of the state and in every way would make for a better agriculture.

Reforestation of Waste Land.
I wish to call your attention to the fact that there are many hundreds of thousands of acres of land in this state better suited to forestry than to anything else. Private owners of land, however, will not content themselves with a crop which does not mature for half a century. They will, therefore, naturally not plant these acres to trees unless they have encouragement from the state. It is possible that if all the now waste land in Illinois were planted to trees, in half a century they would produce timber enough for our own needs. Besides this, such forests would help to conserve moisture, would diminish the damage from overflow, and would tend to prevent the washing and gullying of our rolling lands. The state should adopt a policy to encourage the reclaiming of these waste acres.

Welfare of Industrial Workers.
One of the subjects which must engage our constant attention is the well-being of those men and women employed in industrial pursuits. The true test of a country's greatness is the lot in life of the average men and women—the men and women of the shop, of the factory, and of the farm. These are they who carry on the work of civilization, and a nation is strong in proportion to their well-being. Whatever permanently improves their lot in life is best for all and best for the state.

In industrial occupations the loss of life or limb, or other personal injury of the employed should be regarded as a factor in the cost of production. Compensation for such loss of ability should be a part of the cost of the product. Workingmen's compensation laws are therefore based upon sound principle. Even more important is it that the workingman should work under such conditions as to reduce the danger of injury to the minimum. And the likelihood of such injury will be greatly lessened by a rigid and efficient administration of our factory and inspection laws. Such an administration will be greatly strengthened by the establishment of a department of labor, with a trained and competent man at its head.

The legal limitation of the hours of labor for women engaged in industrial pursuits is for the best interests of society as a whole. No state is worthy of respect if its chief care is not the quality of succeeding generations. What the men and women of the next generation will be depends upon what the mothers of this generation are. The state, therefore, is vitally interested in requiring that our women shall not work under such conditions, or during such part of the day, as to impair their vitality or prevent them from becoming the mothers of a hardy race.

Wards of the State.
The defectives of society found in our state institutions—the insane, the feeble-minded, the epileptic, the morally defective, the habitual criminal, are entitled to humane treatment. But this is not all. Society should also concern itself with the means for the prevention of further defectives. Laboratories and clinics have been founded in Germany and in other states for the study of the causes of these various afflictions. The municipal court of Chicago has done exceedingly valuable work along the same lines. We should pursue these investigations further. Such investigations should be considered a vital part of any scheme for handling our defectives. From these investigations we can deduce the most advantageous methods both for caring for our defectives and for diminishing their number for the future. Their number is now constantly increasing in proportion to our entire population. If this increase is permitted to continue indefinitely, it will be only a question of time when the effectiveness of society will be no longer able to bear the burdens of caring for the defectives, and civilization will lapse.

Social justice does not consider alone the defectives and incompetents of society. It recognizes that, after all, the business of civilization is carried forward by the great mass of independent, self-respecting citizens who ask no direct aid from the government. A paternalism which considers only the weaker members of society, to such an extent as to impair the rugged independence of these men and women, would ultimately defeat its own ends.

Reduce Number of Elections.
The number and frequency of our elections should be reduced. Elections have been multiplied and our election machinery is cumbersome and complicated. The burden of expense which elections impose is becoming unbearable. But this is not the most important consideration. The lengthening of the ballot and the increasing frequency of elections are tending to defeat the very purpose of democracy. They have caused interest in public affairs to flag. The stay-at-home vote is becoming ominous. The ballot has been cheapened. Decrease the number of elections, and public interest will be quickened.

Enfranchisement of Absent Voters.
In the revision of our election laws, one subject should not be overlooked. Under our present laws, the elector must be present in person on registration and election days. Vast armies of commercial travelers, railway men, and business men are required by the necessities of their business, on registration and election days to be absent from their homes. Virtually, this large number of intelligent and progressive citizens is disfranchised. Some means should be devised, if practicable, to remedy this condition. It has been done in other states. In framing this legislation, care must be exercised to prevent fraud.

Equal Suffrage.
Under the decision of our courts, the legislature may extend suffrage to women only for offices created by statute. The present law upon the subject does not embrace all of the elective statutory offices. It should be extended to all such offices.

It is an anomaly in our state that women should have the right to vote for presidential electors and not have the right to vote for offices created by our state constitution. This anomaly, however, can be removed only by a change in the constitution.

Good Roads.
Good roads are a good investment. But a comprehensive system of good roads must wait for a generation, unless bonds are issued to defray the cost. Motor vehicles are rapidly supplanting horse-drawn vehicles. When good roads have become the rule, and not the exception as now, auto trucks will likely take the place of horses and wagons in the transportation of the products of the farm. With good roads, the upkeep and maintenance of motor vehicles would be largely reduced. The license fees now paid are only a trifling percentage of the cost of operation. If good roads were assured, the owners of motor vehicles could pay a much larger license fee and still be the gainers. I believe it is possible to work out some plan by which the principal and interest of a bond issue sufficient for this purpose could be largely paid from the receipts of such license fees.

Supervision of Private Banks.
There is an urgent demand for the supervision of private banks. Indeed, it is difficult to understand why this demand should have been denied so long. The right to conduct a bank has always been regarded as a privilege; it imposes a high duty upon him who exercises the privilege. All other kinds of business in which the element of trust is so large a factor were long since brought under state supervision. There is no reason why corporations exercising this privilege should be subject to supervision by the state, and not the individual. It is time that this exception to all the sound rules of government supervision should be wiped out.

We have declared for the control by Chicago of its own local public utilities. Just how this control should be worked out is a problem peculiarly resting upon the people of Chicago. The great metropolises of the world become in a large measure political units. The public utilities of such cities relate themselves to the business of the people, to their well-being at home, to their recreation, and, in fact, are closely interwoven with their daily life. The question, therefore, of the control of the public utilities of Chicago principally affects the people of Chicago, and they should have the right of control of such utilities. The form that such control shall take will not answer the need unless it shall be satisfactory to the people of Chicago.

Enforcement of Law.
We are peculiar in this: Something goes wrong, and we enact a law and there the matter rests, as though the law were an end in itself. We are confronted with a problem requiring solution, and then we pass the problem on to a commission and felicitate ourselves that we have solved the problem. We must progress. Progress is the law of life. The progress needed most now is progress in administration. The best law badly administered is worse than none. For ours is a government of law. In America the sovereign power resides in the people, but the people speak only through the law. Whatever, therefore, law is disregarded, the sovereignty of the people is insulted, and no sovereign power, whether it be demos or king, can long rule unless it has the vigor and the will to vindicate itself.

Our public business is the most important of all our business. We too often say that our private affairs will not permit us to interest ourselves in public affairs. We seem to forget that if government were suspended for a single day, our private affairs would be of no moment—that ruin would rule all about us. But government is not automatic. Perpetual motion is an idle dream in government as in mechanics. Upon us, gentlemen of the General Assembly, rests a heavy responsibility. We can meet this responsibility only if we enter upon our great work in a spirit of hearty co-operation, with a high resolve that, so far as lies in our power, the institution of self-government which we inherited from our fathers shall be transmitted to our children unimpaired.

L. F. Reynolds of Los Angeles Weathers
Business and Family Crash and Returns After Three Years to Wife and Son.

Los Angeles.—Renewing a romance which hinged on a secret agreement made at the time of their divorce in Denver, Colo., three years ago, Linn F. Reynolds of this city and his former wife have just been married the second time.

"She told me that if I would go away and make good we would be married again," said Reynolds. "Now we have carried out our promises to each other—promises known to none but God and ourselves. Three months before the decree was granted, our little son, John David, was born, and it was that little mite of humanity, more than anything else, that determined us to live down the past and make a new home."

Lived Beyond Their Means.

When Louise Lawlor married Linn Reynolds, she was a popular society girl, just twenty years old, the daughter of a wealthy manufacturer of Denver. Reynolds, twenty-two years old, was in business and was making $4,000 a year. But he and his bride had not learned to value money, and lived far beyond their means. Soon the crash came. Reynolds was left without a dollar and heavily in debt. This, with other complications, made trouble for them which ended in the divorce court. But before they parted they agreed that, if the husband lived down the past, some day they would marry again.

"For awhile after the divorce," said Reynolds, "I kept slipping until I was down and out completely. Everybody was knocking me, and the world looked pretty blue. Finally I borrowed enough money to leave Denver and go to San Francisco. But I failed in every effort I made to get along. Discouraged and almost penniless, I went to Los Angeles, and there for six months I all but starved, working as an extra at six dollars a week in motion picture studios. It seemed as if fate had decreed that I must never again see my wife and baby."

Husband "Came Back."

But one day Reynolds saw his chance, took advantage of it, and won out. Stories of his success reached his former wife. Yet not one word did they write each other until a short time ago, when Reynolds sent her a letter reminding her of their secret promise, declaring that he still loved her, and that he wanted to hear his little boy call him "daddy."

The very next mail brought the girl's answer, and a few days later she was in Los Angeles with curly-headed John David.

Atlanta, Ga.—"Try my boy for bootlegging and send him to the chain gang, judge, but don't send him back to that reform school," was the plea made before Judge Johnson by the mother of D. A. Dougherty, an eighteen-year-old boy, who was brought before the recorder on a charge of having failed to return to the reformatory after having been given a leave of absence to have his teeth fixed at Atlanta.

His mother charged that he had been given 30 lashes and put on bread and water and that he had been forced to work "like a dog" at the reformatory.

Grand Jury Indictments

The Livingston county grand jury completed its work last Friday afternoon and reported to Judge G. W. Patton that it had found eight true bills as follows: Charley Cephas Jones, colored, burglary and larceny. Jones is charged with the burglary of two residences in Pontiac on Thanksgiving night.

Charley Cephas Jones, colored, larceny. Jones is charged with the theft of some clothing from the place of business of John Mosley, of Pontiac, where he was then employed.

John Nagle, alias Jack Nagle, selling liquor to minors. Nagle is charged with selling liquor to a number of minors in Pontiac.

Gilbert Young, larceny. Young is charged with the theft of a quantity of honey from a resident of Cornell.

August Stepnics, wife abandonment. Stepnics is charged with having abandoned his wife at Flanagan.

Emmett Hess, assault with a deadly weapon. Hess is charged with having made an assault upon the person of James Dolan in Pontiac early in the winter, during which assault Dolan was badly cut about the body.

Oscar Johnson, colored, burglary and larceny. Johnson is charged with having burglarized the general merchandise store of Wilhelm Nolte at Griswold.

Joe Wilson, assault to kill. Wilson is charged with having made an assault upon the person of Emmett DeMoss at Wing, during which assault DeMoss was badly cut about the body.

Death of Baby Boy

Willis LaVerne, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Hendrix, of near Buckingham, died Sunday at the Presbyterian hospital in Chicago, where he underwent an operation for the removal of a foreign substance, supposed to have lodged in his throat. He developed pneumonia which caused his death.

The body was brought to the home on the evening train Sunday and funeral services were held at the M. E. church Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Rev. Speaker drew a very impressive lesson from the words of David, "Can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me."

Mrs. Joseph Inkster sang, "Two Little Hands," with a quartette accompaniment on the chorus, in a very touching manner.

The entire community extend heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

From Kansas.

A letter from F. H. Miller of Wichita, Kansas, written on Jan. 1, 1917 says: We are enjoying good health and getting along fairly well. Had a very nice Christmas and the finest New Year's as far as weather is concerned. You could go in your shirt sleeves. I suppose you have read of the big fire we had. The Mason's Home was entirely destroyed. The most deplorable sight I ever saw. Three old people, three children and one young lady twenty years old, who was to be married Jan. 20th, lost their lives. Cecil and Florence are going to school again since Mrs. Miller is able to get around once more. She is getting along very nicely after her spell of sickness. Give my regards to all the boys and ask Dr. Miller where Hughes is? Tell him it is too bad, but we could not help it. Please send the Enquirer to 1516 So. Lawrence Avenue.

Local News Notes.

—Mrs. Jacob Spies, for many years a resident of Cabery, is quite ill with congestion of the lungs at the home of her daughter, Mrs. P. F. Trecker, in Kankakee. Her daughters, Mrs. Felix Dischinger, of Chicago Heights; Mrs. E. Littlejohn, of Kentland, Ind.; and Mrs. John Landrigan, of Cavour, S. D., were called to Kankakee by the critical illness of Mrs. Spies.

—Wm. Naas, Jr. who has been afflicted with throat trouble for some time, underwent an operation at St. Luke's hospital in Chicago Monday morning at 9 o'clock. A foreign growth was removed. Those present at the operation were Mrs. Wm. Naas, Jr., Mrs. Thos. Casey, Henry Naas, Jr. and Charles Naas of this place, and Henry Pastorel of Chicago. Mr. Naas withstood the operation nicely, but must undergo another operation of the throat, which is expected to be performed today. His many friends hope for his safe and speedy recovery.

—Mrs. John Mentzer entertained nine of her lady friends at her home Friday afternoon. The principle pastime of the afternoon was quilting, the ladies working on a quilt belonging to Garfield Mentzer. Each lady did her best as the quilt is one highly prized by Mr. Mentzer, having been pieced and presented to him by his grandmother, Mrs. Oehme, over twenty years ago. Even Mrs. Mentzer's three-year-old grand-daughter tried her hand at quilting but soon gave it up and made a blanket for her dolly. At 3:30 o'clock light refreshments of fruits and nuts were served. An enjoyable time was passed by all present.—Contributed.

In Memorial.

"In memory of Mrs. Lucille Gebhardt, I ask that the following poem be published in the Enquirer.—A FRIEND."

GOD'S BOUQUET.

The florist to His garden came,
With the intent to please
The Ruler's taste He knew so well—
He did it with greatest ease.
He culled a floweret here and there,
Sweet-scented and so bright,
And often as His shears He used
A bud was brought to sight.
For no bouquet is half complete
Without some buds so rare,
Safe nestled midst the brightest bloom
So much the gardener's care.
God, the Great Ruler of all things,
Has fixed a festival day
In which Christ Jesus, His dear Son,
Comes to His own to stay.
And, as He His own florist is,
He's plucking day by day
The rarest bloom His garden bears
To grace that festival day.
And as He plucks, His shears of love,
Obedient to His will,
Finds a sweet rosebud hanging low,
So silent and so still,
And yet another one He sees,
Attractive to His sight,
Which, added to His great bouquet,
Will be His Son's delight.
So while this garden world of God
Is filled with bloom so sweet,
God needs them for His great bouquet
He's preparing for this great meet.

Farewell Surprise.

Tuesday evening of last week, a number of old friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McCaughey, Sr., gathered at their home, to spend the evening with them before they moved to Kempton. A drizzling rain lessened the crowd somewhat, but a pleasant social evening was spent by those present. At midnight a lap lunch was served, and then Mrs. Earl Gunderson, in behalf of those present, presented Mr. and Mrs. McCaughey with a beautiful rug, as a token of memorial of the old friends and neighbors. After this the guests departed, wishing them happiness in their new home.

Mr. and Mrs. McCaughey have resided on the home place twenty-four years and will move to their new home in Kempton in a short time.

Going Up.

Forrest Rambler: Everything is going up—the limit is the sky, if we can't raise the price to eat per chance we'll have to die. The cost of all we eat and wear has raised so like the deuce, that unless the president takes a hand, we'll all have to vamoose. The speculators blame the war, and say that cars are shy, but that is not the reason that the prices are so high. This money-maddened, robbing gang are after all the gold; the picking is so easy it makes them mighty bold. It's time that congress took a hand to make them toe the line, and soaked them good and plenty with a million dollar fine. The operations of this bunch of pirates bold and bad, causes dad a lot of worry and makes mother feel real sad. One man corners all the eggs, another all the wheat, and it makes a combination that is surely hard to beat. The food that should be left at home is sent across the sea, but perhaps the Allies need it 'bout as bad as you and me. That we should feed that warring land across the briny deep, and make high prices here at home is a little bit too steep. The price of flour is higher than it's been in twenty years, and that it will go even higher is what everybody fears. Potatoes are a luxury, the crop is very light, they dump spuds in the river to keep up the shortage fight. Navy beans like bullets, are worth their weight in gold, a dozen for a quarter is about all so we are told. The railroad cars are full of coal, but a famine is at hand, because the crooked brokers refuse to supply the demand. The price of clothing, too, has soared almost out of sight, if skirts go up much higher won't some women be a fright? The paper mills are running short of pulp and rags and dye and if their products go much higher they will surely reach the sky. A time will come however, when prices begin to fall, and these unscrupulous brokers will then begin to bawl. We hope they get it in the neck and tumble mighty quick, and that the 'corners' they have now make them mighty sick.

Feed The Birds.

Letters issued to the deputies from the state game warden's office make an appeal to the people of the country to feed the birds as much as possible during the periods of heavy snow and sleet, as it is very difficult for the birds to secure food when the ground is covered with snow.

The birds will appreciate it very much if the people will shake the crumbs from the table cloths upon the snow instead of throwing them into the fire.

January Clearance SaleA Great Slaughter of All Prices

WE ANNOUNCE an important event during the entire month of January in all lines of women's outer wearing apparel. Altho our stock is new and clean thruout, we are determined that every fall and winter garment must be sold this month. The values at their regular selling prices are unquestioned and undoubtedly the greatest ever offered in Kankakee. So when we tell you that the reductions on all suits and coats will average from 25 to 50 per cent. you may rest assured the opportunity is exceptional and not likely to be duplicated for a long time to come—especially not on such fresh stock—no garment having been in our salesrooms more than four months.

THE REDUCTIONS OF 25% TO 50% ARE REAL

A comparison of values will easily show that we are making an actual sacrifice in price of every garment offered during our January Clearing Event, and as the stock is somewhat limited we advise an early visit to insure choice selection.
