

CABERY WOMAN CALLED BY DEATH THANKSGIVING DAY

SERVICES HELD ON SATURDAY FOR MRS. THERESA WALSMITH

The thunder of guns in our present world of chaos struck but a note of heraldry to the soul of another of our beloved, as Theresa Walsmith left this world of suffering on November 23rd, to greet her Maker in the after-world. In the loss of this quiet, lovely mother the community has suffered. Hers was a retiring nature that did not proclaim its existence to a glamorous social world, but one which found greatest satisfaction in making her home an earthly haven where her children grew to adulthood in constant companionship with Mother and Dad.

Anna Marie Theresa, eldest daughter of Peter and Emma Korrer, was born on October 19, 1888, at Cabery, Illinois. Here she spent her childhood and young womanhood.

She was wedded to John Henry Walsmith in Chicago on November 16, 1906. Her married life was spent with her companion on the farm southwest of Cabery. Three children came to their home in the course of years: John William, William Frederick and Emma Louise. William Frederick preceded his parents in death. Fourteen months ago her husband passed to his reward.

She passed from this life on Nov. 23 at the home of her son, having attained the age of 51 years, one month and four days. She is survived by her son and daughter and her sister, Mrs. Charles Pastorek, of Cabery.

She leaves behind her a host of friends who with her immediate family mourn the passing of a gracious neighbor, a loving mother and a devoted Christian. Faithful in life's duties, patient in suffering, and triumphant in death, the memory of her life will be cherished by all of those who knew this good woman. Such was the lovely tribute read over her remains during the funeral service at the Presbyterian church on Saturday, November 25th.

These services were held at 2 in the afternoon with Rev. Jas. T. Ross officiating, and being assisted by Rev. Paul Mellich of Hopeville, Ind.

A quartette composed of Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Shult, A. J. McKinney and Mrs. Clarence Dowse, accompanied by Miss Nellrose Correll, sang "In the Garden," "The Old Rugged Cross," and "No Night There." Mrs. Fred Burch played the Processional and Recessional.

Six friends acted as pall bearers, laying their friend tenderly to rest in Mount Hope cemetery, beneath a gorgeous blanket of season's flowers. These were: W. H. Schafroth, Durwood Clayton, A. C. Clapp, Charles Christ, Henry Canham and Frederick Raab. The flower bearers were: Lila Walsmith, Pauline Walsmith, Neville Holmes, Dorothy Drew, Virginia Beatty and Ruth Koerner.

The Enquirer joins the community in extending its sincere sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Those from a distance who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Correll and Miss Iva Correll, of Kankakee; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Maguire, of Campus; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Huntley, Mrs. George Drew and daughter Dorothy; Mrs. Wm. McCormick, Robert Kirstein, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lester, of Clarion, Ia.; Mrs. Ora Thatcher, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Bochtler, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wirtz, Mrs. Ed Wirtz, all of Sonoma, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walsmith and family of Joliet; Mr. and Mrs. John Baird, of Odell; Miss Della Perden and Lynn Pease, of East Lansing, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Raab, Reddick; Rev. and Mrs. Paul Mellich, Franklin, Ind.; Miss Carrie Marie Kierce, of St. Anne; Mrs. Jay Fosdick, of Kempton; also many friends from surrounding towns.

Henry Falck purchased the 240 acre Falck estate farm for $105.50 per acre Monday at the courthouse in Pontiac. Mr. Falck is the present occupant of the farm, which is four miles east and two miles north of Sibley. Sibley Journal.

One of Will Morris' coon dogs had a rather unusual experience Tuesday night when he went into a tile on one farm about nine o'clock and was not recovered until about 11 o'clock the next day on another farm, some 1,600 feet from the point where he entered the tile. The dog was in fine physical condition when taken out and wanted to get back into the tile to continue his search for the coon after he was rescued. Fairbury Blade.

Piper City, Nov. 21.—On Monday of next week E. P. Wilson of Piper City, prominent horse buyer of east central Illinois will ship a carload of select horses to Chicago, where they will be inspected by representatives of the French government who are in the United States to purchase animals for army service. Riding horses which weigh between 1,100 and 1,250 pounds and artillery horses ranging in weight from 1,300 to 1,500 pounds are in great demand for the French army. These animals must range in age from four and one-half to eight years and must be perfectly sound for acceptance by the inspectors.

Work on the foundation was begun yesterday. The basement of the structure will comprise a kitchen, dining room, rest rooms, vault for township records, and council room. Two other contracts were also awarded. H. L. Thompson of Pontiac was successful bidder on electrical wiring at $365. Eden & Freitag were awarded the heating contract on a bid of $1125. The board of managers includes Edgar Brockman, W. F. Babcock and Ralph Manssen.

When the movement of the government sealed corn was started several weeks ago, it was found that many cribs were full of weevil germs, says The Bethany Echo. This is the first time that it was ever found in that part of the state. In the southern states and the southern part of Illinois it has been found and makes it nearly impossible to store corn from one year to the next. Many of the farmers around Bethany think that by storing the corn for two years, as has been done in the past two years, has invited the weevil to that county. What effect it will have on the future of storing corn cannot be told, but in the south it has stopped it completely.

Five Chicago hunters were arrested Sunday by Deputy Game Warden Everett Brammer on complaint of Chester Bayston who found the men hunting on his farm northwest of Chatsworth. The men were taken before Justice of the Peace Hilko Remmers and on pleas of guilty were assessed a fine of $15 and costs each. Upon the plea of the defendants that it was their first offense and that they had not intended to enter the farm of Mr. Bayston, the fines were remitted on condition that the five pay the costs of $3.60 each. The men gave their names as Thomas Clifford, Sam Matul, Christ Tassor, Jesse Oliver and Thomas Polupolus. The men said they had obtained permission from Ned Danforth to hunt on his farm and had climbed over a fence into another field, thinking they were still on the Danforth farm and were trespassing on the Bayston farm when arrested. A verdict of $15,000 damages against A. B. McCollum, owner of the McCollum theatre chain, was returned in circuit court in favor of Mrs. Gertrude Curtis, before Judge James V. MARGARET ADAM VICTIM

OF A HAPPY SURPRISE

Margaret Adam was a very surprised young lady on Saturday afternoon when she returned from a short auto trip—the trick of the hostess to lure her from the house—to find a group of girls waiting to bid her "Happy Birthday."

Several rounds of fifty were enjoyed, with Mildred Frantz winning first prize and Catherine Wagner the consolation prize. Warner was awarded the door prize.

A delicious lunch of ice cream and two kinds of cake was served by the hostess, Mrs. Ivan Edman, assisted by Mrs. Edward Lovell, Rosella Koerner and Mrs. Thomas Edman. The birthday cakes were baked by Mrs. Thomas Edman and Mrs. Edward Lovell.

Margaret received many nice gifts. The guests were: Avis Easington, Alice Jean Bouk, Evelyn Schafroth, Laura Hanson, Lois Quayle, Catherine Wagner, Betty Koerner, Naomi Kirk, Shirley Varney, Lucille Bouk, Alice Hummel, Mildred Frantz and Dorine Koerner. One brave young man managed to break down the barrier and found a most cheery welcome from the group—John Joseph Koerner. We're for you, John, don't ever let them leave you out.

HAAB-LOCKE

Miss Alma Locke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Locke, of Cullom, and Floyd Haab, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Haab, of Fairbury, were married Wednesday, Nov. 22, at the Methodist church, parsonage in Pontiac, with the Rev. Harry A. Cochran officiating at the single ring ceremony.

Attending the young couple were Mrs. Helen Rapp, sister of the groom, and Irvin Locke, brother of the bride. The bride was attired in a wine wool suit with matching accessories and Mrs. Rapp wore gray wool with black accessories.

Mrs. Haab is a graduate of Saunemin High school with the class of '34 and for the past three years has been employed in Pontiac. Mr. Haab attended the Forest schools and is engaged in farming.

A two-course wedding dinner was served following the ceremony, to the bridal party. Mr. and Mrs. Haab then departed on a wedding trip, the destination of which was not revealed.

their neglect resulted in the death of her husband, Henry Curtis, in the fire that swept through the Little Theatre and the Wood cafe on West Walnut street, Sept. 5, 1936. Curtis, who owned the "Nickie" cafe, located just west of the restaurant, was out of any danger, when he rushed back into his place of business to rescue his cash register containing about $3. While he was doing this the west wall of the cafe toppled, crushing Curtis beneath the falling debris. Late in December, 1936, Mrs. Curtis filed suit. After a day and a half of testimony was heard, the case went to the jury Tuesday evening and the jury returned its verdict at 8 o'clock that night.

SPORT SHORTS

(By Ed. J. Ginter)

Bags a Deer.

L. M. Nickerson, Kempton outdoor man and sportsman, returned home with a deer that he got up north. This column will soon have his story of this trip.

Howard Raboin, Cullom city clerk, tells me he has sold 155 hunting licenses and will sell about 75 more.

Sportsmen of the city get a kick out of us dudes from the sticks. When they get us in the city they sell us the postoffice, a bridge, a park or what-have-you. I should not tell this but it's too good to keep. A bunch came down from the city and bought a bunch of wild turkeys. All they got were guineas. A game warden stopped a car of hunters from the city to check their game in the back of the car. They had a goat which some farmer sold to them for a deer.

A carload of hunters stopped to ask a dumb sort of farmer who was walking down the road where they could get a place to hunt. He told the boys that he owned the section of land to their right, and that he would sell them the right to hunt on there the whole season for $35.00. The boys paid him and started to hunt; they got picked up for trespassing and it cost them $35.00 more and they never did find the dude that got their 35 bucks.

A bunch of hunters got picked up for having four dressed hen pheasants. When the justice of the peace looked them over he found that the pheasants were nothing but guineas.

A farmer was out combining beans when a carload of hunters drove in and asked him if they could hunt. They told the farmer that they were farmers from up north a ways. One of the boys looked at his combine and said, "what a good looking corn picker you got there."

B. F. William, with the International Harvester Co., Peoria, Ill., was out with his duck club. It was a nice day he took his club out and along as if the duck shooting rod along as if the duck club was no good he could fish.

The first thing he did was to get two ducks in the middle of the river, the next thing was to retrieve them so he got his casting rod out and tied on a plug. At first cast he took Mr. Duck and started to reel it in when bang! a big fish took duck, plug and all. He stayed with this big fish for five hours before he could land him. The fish weighed 49 pounds and 10 ounces after he got the duck out of the fish's stomach. The duck was all right only it tasted a little "fishy."

Look over the list of Sportsmen's Club members for 1940 and the names line up like this: J. F. Whitman, Esther E. Whitman, Bonita Whitman, Merlin Whitman, James H. Whitman. The Whitmans are 100% Sportsmen's Club members. They enjoy the out-of-doors and think a lot of the work the Sportsmen's Club is doing.

After talking to hunters and farmers there is no question about their going the limit to back up a quail program for 1940.

Dr. L. A. Dibert, taxidermist and veterinarian, and president of Cullom Sportsmen's Club, has been very busy this pheasant season mounting pheasants. He has worked from all over the state. He has completed two deer heads for sportsmen from Kankakee. Doc tells me the pheasants he has worked on are full of grasshoppers. When it comes to wild life he knows their habits. This helps him a lot in his taxidermist work. You should stop in and look over Doc's work and see his new office. He will be more than glad to show you how his work looks mounted. The following statement will hold true in more ways than one. Sometimes you get 'em, sometimes you don't, and it isn't what you bag that keeps you interested—it's what gets away.

LLOYDS HELD FOR OTTAWA BANK LOSS

Chicago, Nov. 22.—The National Bank of Ottawa, Ill., was awarded $60,000, Tuesday, in a judgment by Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan against Lloyds of London, insurance company. The bank had filed suit, stating that one of its messengers had been robbed of $60,000 and charged that the insurance company had failed to make good the loss as required in a contract with the bank.

The bank filed the suit after the American Insurance company had loaned it $60,000 to make up for the loss.—United Press dispatch. Charles ("Mickey") O'Reilly, former Cullom youth, was the messenger, mentioned above, who was robbed of a $60,000 shipment of currency several years ago.

BEWARE RABBIT FEVER!

Too much stress cannot be laid on the danger of rabbit fever. Many violent cases are reported and all dressing rabbits should take care that they have no sores or breaks in the skin, as it seems that is where the trouble always begins. Mrs. Ridgeway, of Saunemin, reports that her brother, of near Clay City, is critically ill from the disease.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LABINE

Political Activity Starts Early To Capture Publicity Spotlight Before Congress Meets Again

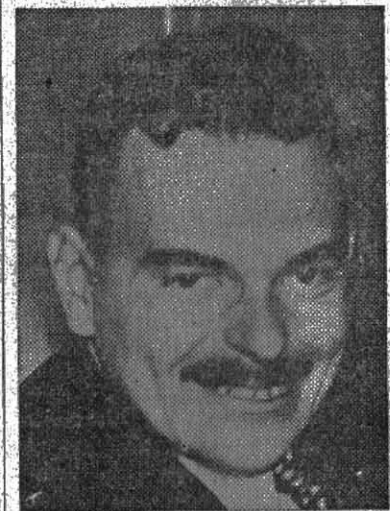

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

POLITICS: Stump Trail

War and neutrality made way in November for politics. For between now and January 3, when reconvening congress grasps public attention, politicians have their only pre-convention chance to sell The Cause of 1940. On the Republican side at least three stumpers were hitting the trail, while national headquarters in Washington planned a skull session December 7 to map campaign strategy. The Democratic party, meanwhile, contented itself waiting for Franklin Roosevelt to say yes or no.

New York's District Attorney Tom Dewey was not so busy prosecuting German-American Bundsman Fritz

TOM DEWEY
Answer at Minneapolis?

Kuhn that he failed to hear the question most good Republicans have been asking about him: "Where does he stand on national issues?" Dewey, like at least two other 1940 hopefuls, was preparing to talk. First on the agenda is a speech at Minneapolis December 6, where party observers hoped to hear an answer. Other stumpers:

(1) Ohio's Sen. Robert Taft, who ranks low on Gallup polls, opened his campaign at Cleveland by criticizing Gallup polls for "leading to superficial facts and piling up bandwagon sentiment." On his schedule before Christmas are at least eight states.

(2) New Hampshire's H. Styles Bridges, who has dropped the "H." and is now "Bridges," will speak at Manchester.

(3) Michigan's Sen. Arthur Vandenberg was silent; so was Pennsylvania's Gov. Arthur James, latest new candidate.

G. O. P. 1940 strategy will probably be "streamlined" if early signs offer an indication. Seriously considered is a blitzkrieg from September to November, instead of a long campaign. Meanwhile Marion Martin, assistant national chairman, told reporters of a women's organization 200,000 strong, which will sell the party not by punching doorbells but through social contacts. One job: To scotch the notion that all Republican women are rich and wear orchids.

Franklin Roosevelt kept himself busy playing with the press. Laying a cornerstone for the Jefferson memorial in Washington, he said he "hoped" he could be present when it was dedicated in 1941. This, he commented later, was injected intentionally to trip up the commentators. A few days later, dedicating his memorial library at Hyde Park, he poked more fun: "I hope they (the press) will give due interpretation to my statement that we hope it will be a fine day when we open the building."

At Baltimore, Montana's Sen. Burton Wheeler (who may be John Lewis' candidate) made a speech that looked conciliatory with Franklin Roosevelt. At Dallas the Texas Editorial association, booming John Garner, took a crack at John Lewis' criticism of their hero by holding a banquet dedicated to "sin and corruption." The "whisky-drinking old man" who was busy fishing that day, got himself toasted with milk.

EUROPE:

Protest or Plea?

A war that hurts civilians is at once the most painful and the most likely to end in a hurry. Thus far the War of 1939 has disdained bombing cities and has even been easy on troops in the front line. But a continent whose life blood courses the seven seas cannot laugh off many body blows to its merchant marine, by late November the intensified warship-submarine-mine warfare being waged between Britain and Germany had taken a big toll and the price was getting higher every day. Britain searched for the Nazi raiders Deutschland and Admiral Scheer while the air force made a futile raid on the naval base at Wilhelmshaven. The navy was ordered to seize all Nazi ships transferred to Russian registry.

Cause of this scurrying was the war's second major disaster. The Athenian sinking cost 112 lives, but 150 were feared lost when the Dutch liner Simon Bolivar struck a mine in the English channel. Both Germans and English denied responsibility while Lithuanian, Italian and Swedish merchant vessels were also being sent to the bottom. In neutral ports, word of such disasters spread quickly; observers wondered if the protest might not take form in new peace pleas.

On land, Adolf Hitler had little chance for western front activity. He was too busy in Czechoslovakia, where student-inspired uprisings against Nazi rule were smashed via "liquidation" of 12 ringleaders before a firing squad.

Trouble Ahead

The most incorrigible Finnish optimist could not deny that the future looked tough for the home team. With negotiators back from their fruitless talks in Moscow, all Finland quavered as the vitriolic Russian press loosed blast after blast against its Scandinavian neighbor. Moscow was obviously building up war talk as a prelude to what observers think is an almost certain "self-defense" invasion.

LABOR: Liability

Compared with A. F. of L., the hands of C. I. O. are comparatively clean in the justice department's campaign to remove alleged trade restraints in the building industry. Though both organizations have maintained Trust Buster Thurman Arnold has no right to indict trade unions under the anti-trust laws, it is chiefly A. F. of L. building groups which are suffering in the present drive. Already indicted, for example, is William Hutchenson of Indianapolis, head of the carpenters' union and an A. F. of L. vice president.

Thurman Arnold listened to labor's complaints a few days and then started labor with a ruling: Organized labor is not immune from prosecution, and the justice department will prosecute unions attempting to prevent private industry from using improved production methods designed to bring cheaper and better goods to the buying public.

TAXATION: Argument

Long simmering has been the anticipated blow-up between spenders and savers which is bound to come when congress meets next January. Reason: In the next fiscal year the national debt will pass the $45,000,000,000 legal limit; congress will have its choice of boosting that limit or making an about-face on spending.

First signs of an inter-administration squabble came after Marriner Eccles, federal reserve chairman and spending advocate, told St. Louis bankers that congress should raise taxes next year. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau was vacationing at the time, so the dirty work of repudiating Eccles' statement fell to Undersecretary John W. Hanes. Said he: "I don't think he (Eccles) spoke for the administration. I doubt seriously if he spoke for congress. I am certain he didn't speak for the treasury."

MARRINER ECCLES
No friend of the treasury.

Observers thought John Hanes' boss would secretly applaud the remark for Henry Morgenthau, although loyal to the President—has fought deficit spending. And the treasury, far from stumbling blindly ahead, is sifting thousands of suggestions solicited during the past summer before offering congress any recommendations on a 1940 tax program.

That congress may also be contrary was hinted when Colorado's Sen. Alva Adams told the press he favored establishment of a congressional agency to "police" the appropriation demands of executive departments, not by way of blocking requests for funds but to give the taxpayer a chance to argue his side of the story.

Meanwhile it was learned the budget bureau may not issue its customary revised estimate of receipts and expenditures this year. Like the congressional tax committee, which is holding its recommendations in abeyance, the budget bureau is stymied by abnormal conditions abroad.

Benito Mussolini warned that Italy wants the "final word" when peacetime returns to Europe.

Wang Ching-wei, whom Japan hoped to establish as puppet ruler of China, has balked so much that establishment of the "government" has been postponed.

PAN AMERICA: Good and Bad

In a happy mood did Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins announce foreign trade figures for the autumn months. Exports to the United Kingdom (except cotton) were down appreciably; so were exports to Belgium, Netherlands, Spain, Germany and Poland. But a ray of warm sunshine came from the south: Exports to Latin America in October were 28 per cent higher than in September, $47,000,000 against $36,700,000.

But all was not peaches and cream. Complaints against the government's reciprocal trade program began blossoming in farm and industrial circles, and were even felt by diplomats.

Announcing the new trade pact with Venezuela would take effect December 16, the President pointed out that Germany and all countries under her domination would not let from any reductions on crude petroleum and miscellaneous agricultural products. This brought two repercussions: (1) Observers wondered whether such recognition of Germany's control over Czechoslovakia and Poland might not be a blunder; (2) the 50 per cent tariff cut on crude oil imports meant, among other things, that Mexico could sell us at a reduced rate the oil she expropriated from U. S. companies.

Loudest objector to the Latin American trade expansion was Fred Breckman, legislative representative of the National Grange, who told that group's convention in Peoria, Ill., that he didn't like the proposed Argentine trade treaty, a pact which would necessitate larger agricultural imports from that nation to offset larger exports from the U. S. Said he: "It looks as if we were going to buy Argentine friendship at the cost of the American farmer."

MISCELLANY: No Sabotage

At Bayonne, N. J., government investigators scoffed at sabotage rumors when a U. S.-owned but Panama-registered tanker exploded to injure four persons.

Quits

At Baltimore, Brother John Capone intimated that Scarface Al, just released from prison, is humbled and ready to cry quits. Said John: "He's in a cheerful mood and doesn't hold a grudge against anybody."

European War Does More Damage To American Industry Than Good

Some Lines of Business Are Profiting, While Others Are Declining; Efforts to Boost Cotton Exports Fail; American Merchant Marine Affected.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Although our nation is not mixed up in the European mess, and its people will not permit any administration to drag us in, it strikes me that the war on the other side of the Atlantic already has done a lot of things which ought to be reviewed. There has been much laughter about the "phony" war and the "sidown strike" of the enemy armies, because thus far there has been no real fighting. I do not propose to discuss that phase of the situation. There are some things which have happened and are happening here at home, however, that surely are worthy of consideration.

When steel began to flash abroad, there were thousands, if not millions, of Americans who believed a conflict overseas would pull us out of the depression. Visions of exports amounting to millions of tons were seen by many of the unthinking and misinformed persons. Higher prices—it is hardly necessary to recall how excited some folks got about the prospects of higher prices and there was talk about shortages and all of that sort of thing. There was the usual effort of a certain type of business interests to grab off extraordinary profits. Most of the price hysteria has collapsed and quite a few persons lost their shirts in the speculation to which they turned with the excitement of war talk.

It is true that there are some industries which are profiting from the war. Some, but not very many. Statistics are tiresome, but close examination of them does reveal, in this instance, how thoroughly spotty the anticipated war boom actually is. In my own appraisal of the situation, based on all of the facts I can obtain along with opinions of experts, I have come to the conclusion that the war thus far has done our American business—agriculture, commerce and industry—more damage than it has done good. That is to say, if it were possible to balance the increase due to the war against the further decline in other lines, the total business of the United States would show an actual loss.

Airplane Manufacturers And Rail Lines Benefited

It can be pointed out, for example, that airplane manufacturers are doing a thriving business. They are selling airplanes for war purposes and they are selling them here, as well. Likewise, the official reports show how the industries producing airplane parts and equipment and certain other types of war material are rushing their products through to a finished state.

The rail lines have benefited. Through a stretch of six consecutive weeks, car loadings—an accurate business barometer—have exceeded 800,000 cars for each seven day period, and then dropped off. In this case, car loadings have shown a vast bulk movement but one must examine the commodities hauled to calculate what conditions are. It is to be noted that there were exceedingly heavy shipments of stuff usable in war included in the 800,000 total. A good deal of this had been ordered previously. It could not be sent out until the so-called arms embargo was removed. Experts appear to believe that a large portion of the shipments may not be repeated. At least, not in such quantities. All of which is to say that shipments of normally domestic products, consumer goods, must still be very much below par.

Respecting the market for so-called consumer goods, mention may be made of apples and what a drug they are on the market these days. This may not be the same in all parts of the United States, but it certainly is true in the great apple growing sections of Virginia. One large grower told me that he had not sold a single apple for the British market where he usually is able to ship several hundred carloads in the course of a season. Imports of all fresh fruits have been banned in England.

The industrial conference board, a private organization which is quite accurate in its reports on business conditions and trends, said lately that our exports to Canada are due to fall with a dull thud. In 1938, Canada acquired 68 per cent of all of the things she imported right across the border in the United States. It is to be remembered, too, that about 40 per cent of all exports from the United States in normal years go to Canada.

What Has War Done to American Merchant Marine?

But the situation is changing rapidly. Canada is going industrial as rapidly as she can under the stress and strain of war. Being a part of the British empire, does any one think that the British war office is going to seek supplies in the United States that can be bought in Canada? Obviously not. To show how Canada has developed her capacity to take care of empire requirements, I believe it is necessary only to report that the Canadian industrial capacity was 67 per cent greater in 1937 than 20 years earlier, or in the midst of the World war. The World war started the trend in Canada; the present European war has given it new impetus and the indications are that exports to Canada hereafter will continue to get smaller.

And what has the war done to the American merchant marine?

Our government has spent a good many hundred millions in building ships and in helping private shipping companies to build ships. It has been a policy of subsidy. But about the same time our ships begin to attract attention on the high seas and in international trade, along comes new war conditions and our flag is forced to stay out of the trade routes that produce the greatest revenue because traffic is heaviest. Of course, it is a policy of the administration that has brought this about. President Roosevelt has felt that adoption of a system of selling goods to belligerents upon the docks of this country—come and get it, pay cash and carry it away in your own ships—is wise. Congress agreed with him.

The same legislation provided that no ships flying the American flag may enter what is called combat zones. So, trade in our ships is confined to those nations not engaged in warfare. It happens, however, that the three greatest buyers who use ships (since Canadian exports are largely by rail) are the three nations now fighting in Europe.

Transfer of Ship Registry Raises Stink in Washington

The latest development with respect to the shipping industry is the effort of one of the great shipping companies to transfer the registry of its ships to Panama—to fly the Panama flag. That action, of course, is like changing your own American citizenship and becoming the subject of another nation. It can be done under the law, but it has raised quite a stink in Washington, because this course of action simply circumvents the so-called cash-and-carry law. Under the Panama flag, those ships could sail into war zone ports which they cannot do as long as they fly the Stars and Stripes from their mastshead. It does not mean a great deal, I believe, except it shows the influence of the European war. Incidentally, the fuss about those ships recalls how difficult it is to make a law that will not have loopholes in it or means of getting around it.)

The war in the Far East has upset practically all trade relations between the United States and Japan and China. There is a quantity of exports yet moving in that direction, but I am told by persons who know the facts that when that war is over, Japan will be without any money and her purchases in the United States will be next to nothing for years to come.

Citation of example and trend and opinion could go on quite at length in this situation. Taken all together it seems to be one of the really important things, next to our own unemployment rolls, because it looks from this date as though the United States is face to face with the necessity of a gigantic readjustment. It seems to me the problem cannot be dodged. Changes must come within our own national economy. We will have to learn just what to produce and how much, because I fear that a large chunk of our export market is gone forever.

Our Cotton Exports Are Continuing to Decline

We have witnessed the spectacle of our secretary of agriculture seeking to get our cotton or some other farm product into foreign markets by use of various forms of cash payments to the producers. While he has been passing out checks, our exports have declined and are continuing to decline, and there is nothing that can be done about it. Other folks have learned to grow cotton and they are not going to stop. We cannot control them by a law saying a farmer must plant only so much, or that there must be six million little pigs killed off.

I was asked recently for my own opinion on the outlook for business. My reply was that I disliked making gloomy predictions. Pollyanna stuff is much more pleasant. On the other hand, President Hoover tried hard to get prosperity to come around the corner, and he looked rather ridiculous when she stayed just around the corner through more than nine years up to the present time. Secretary Hopkins, of the department of commerce, is trying now to induce the coy young woman to come around the same corner. His department has been issuing statements about bulges in production and in sales and in shipments. But I could not read the figures the same way the secretary read them.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—shows heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become overworked and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up night leg pains, swelling, feet constantly tired, nervous all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, stinging or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

CHAPTER XIII—Continued

A half-hour since the doors of the Bon Ton Pool Room had swung open, and Mr. Ernie Watts had barged into the smoke-laden atmosphere. His first question was directed at the house in general, and induced a solemn hush. He asked, "Who tore down that pitcher I passed on the window this afternoon?"

A lanky young gentleman, clad in a blue flannel shirt and decrepit trousers, answered eagerly.

"Andy Forrest tore it down."

"How come?"

"He seen it on the window an' come in. He ripped it right off. An' then he said things."

"What kind of things?"

"Pool-games ceased. Cues were racked and Mr. Watts found himself the center of an avid group. The situation appealed to him, since he considered himself a rather tough person. He hooked thumbs through belt straps and worded his question again. "What sort of things did Andy Forrest say?"

"Ernie," declared the tall one sadly, "he said terrible things. He called you out of yo' name."

"Me?"

"Well, he didn't say You exactly, on account of we didn't admit you done it. . . but he said the feller which did it was a—was a—"

"Was a what?"

"Well, I reckon you can guess what he said. He was mighty hot up."

Ernie tried to look grim. "What else did he say?"

"He said some day he was going to find out who put that pitcher on the window, an' then he was going to beat that feller up."

"Oh! he said that, did he?"

"He sho' did, Ernie. Honest. Of co'se we didn't tell him it was you."

"Why not?"

"We-e-ell, we didn't aim to git you in no trouble. We didn't know was you scared of him or not."

Mr. Watts rose to the crisis. He announced in a large and booming voice that he wasn't skeered of nobody, an' least of all Andy Forrest. Somebody said, "You better had be. Andy said he was going to mop up with you."

Ernie fancied himself a brave young man and a considerable fighter. He realized that he was on trial, that his reputation for courage would stand or fall on the manner in which he handled this situation. He inquired, loudly, "Where's Andy Forrest at now?"

"He's down to Warner's garage."

"Well, I'm going down there an' find out if it's a go or no."

They applauded him. They informed him that he was some man. They expressed apprehension for Andy. They said they'd go along and watch the combat. "Ain't goin' to be no fight," sneered Ernie Watts. "This Andy Forrest don't know nothin' about fightin'."

They milled around the corner of Monument Square and moved en masse down Palmetto Avenue. Warner's Sudden Service Garage was on the corner of that main thoroughfare and Atlantic Street. It was a great, cavernous place, with gas-pumps in front.

Andy and Kay and Jim and Margaret and Barney were in the little machine-shop at the rear when the front entrance filled with young men. Barney said lightly, "Customers, Andy. Business is picking up."

Andy glimpsed the crowd and sensed its hostility. His lips set firmly and his eyes narrowed. A new dignity sat upon him and he spoke quietly. "You-all stay right here."

"Something wrong?"

"Yeh. But I can handle it."

Kay put her hand on his arm. She felt suddenly ill—knowing the answer to the question she was about to ask.

"Something about me, Andy?"

"Maybe. But you-all ain't got anything to do with it."

Clad in overalls and a light flannel shirt, Andy moved down the middle of the old warehouse, toward the men who were crowding through the door. Andy said, "What do you want?"

Ernie Watts stepped forward.

"I'm kind of cravin' to have a little talk with you, Andy."

"Go ahead."

"You was in the Bon Ton this afternoon, wasn't you?"

"Yeh."

"You tore a pitcher off the window, didn't you?"

"Yeh."

"An' you said you was gonna whip the man that put it there, didn't you?"

"Somebody," said Andy, "seems to have been tellin' you the truth."

Margaret Hamilton had been watching the scene with quiet, observant eyes. She leaned close to Kay and whispered, "Do you know the Sheriff?"

"Yeh. Why?"

"Telephone him. Quick. There's going to be trouble."

Kay walked into the machine-shop and whirled the handle of the wall telephone. She got the residence of Sheriff Floyd Griffin and spoke swiftly. Then, compelled by a fascinated horror, she returned to the big outer room.

Andy and Ernie Watts had moved closer to one another. Ernie's friends—a score of them—had surged in through the wide-open door. Barney and Jim Owenby stood silent and tense; eyes and lips grim.

Waiting.

It was Andy who dominated the scene. He moved closer to Mr. Watts. He said, "Was it you who put that picture on the window?"

"Yeh, it was. An' what are you goin' to do about it?"

"If you walk outside with me, I'll show you."

Ernie Watts was a good tactician. Without warning he leaped forward and struck. The blow caught Andy high up on the forehead and spun him around. And Ernie came in behind it. His second punch landed squarely on Andy's jaw. . . .

Andy went down.

He was dazed. For just an instant he sprawled, then clambered to hands and knees—shaking his head. He staggered to his feet. . . . but before Ernie could attack again, something happened.

Barney and Jim Owenby leaped forward. The former pinioned Ernie Watts' arms; the latter grabbed Andy. Andy said, "I'm all right. Let me go."

Ernie Watts struggled with Barney. Sensing an easy victory, he fought to free himself from Barney's amazingly efficient grip. He yelled to his friends, "Make him leave go! They're gangin' me!"

Somebody took the cue. "Leave him go!"

But Barney did not leave him go. He clung tighter. And Jim Owenby pool-room gang lay unconscious. Kay ran forward and dropped to her knees beside the bleeding form of the old man—dabbing at the ugly wound with a pitifully inadequate handkerchief.

The Sheriff looked down at the figure of Doc Morrison. He asked, "Who done this?"

There was no answer. Sheriff Griffin glared at the others. "I know ev'ry last one of you. An' somebody's goin' to pay for this."

He bent over Doc Morrison. He placed the gun beside him on the concrete floor.

"He's bad hurt," announced the Sheriff in a solemn voice. "I'm holding all of you. An' if he dies. . . ."

The hoodlums had lost their beligerence. Even these young men had known and loved Doc Morrison. They were from households in which the venerable Doc had done his greatest charity. Somebody said, in a hushed voice, "God! I wouldn't have hurt Doc for nothin'!"

The Sheriff said, "This town has stood for a lot. But this is something it won't stand for."

In the days which followed, the citizens of Beverly did not gossip. They talked. Talked soberly and sanely. Murder and violence and drinking and gambling had not done this, but a serious injury to Doc Morrison was more than enough.

Even the young men who had comprised the mob, the Bon Ton hangers-on, were awed by the enormity of what they had done. Awed and frightened. The pool-room itself was suddenly deserted as though—because the raid upon Andy Forrest had started from there—a stigma had been put upon it. The young men who chronically infested the place lost their boisterousness. They declared to one another that they was sho' sorry; that there wa'n't no one of them that would hurt Doc Morrison for nothin'. And they meant it.

Contributing causes were forgotten in the actuality of Doc's injury. For the first time in a month Kay Forrest was not the chief subject of conversation. They talked about Doc and of the fight in which he had been injured. The night of the third day the citizens held a mass-meeting. There was little oratory. Men of substance spoke gravely, quietly and seriously. The spirit of the town had changed. This impending tragedy stripped the town of civic pretense and made it really aware of certain internal facts.

On the morning of the fourth day the physician in charge announced publicly that Doc Morrison had regained consciousness and would recover. That morning the sun shone. That morning citizens of Beverly smiled again and today they dared talk of what they would have done had Doc died. They had been afraid to speak of that before, lest—as some of them expressed it—lest they put bad mouth on him.

A new wave of protest and indignation swept the more distant sections of Beauregard County, penetrating deep into Big and Little Moccasin Swamps. Well-meaning but definitely illiterate preachers once again impressed upon their tiny congregations that this was the work of the Devil; that the injury to Doc had been the final warning of a Providence roused to wrath. They yelled hellfire and damnation. And in Beverly itself, the same sentiments were expressed, though in different and perhaps less violent language.

Resolutions were passed. Petitions were circulated. A special meeting of the Town Council was called, after which Mayor Alec Roberts held a long and earnest discussion with Solicitor Gabe Dixon and Sheriff Floyd Griffin. The Sheriff found himself fighting for right and justice; first, because that promised the greatest number of votes in the not-too-distant primary; and, secondly, because he, too, had been deeply fond of Doc Morrison.

Sheriff Griffin thereupon visited Robbie Morse, owner and operator of the White Star Hotel. He said, "I ain't happy to tell you, Robbie—but things has got to be diffent fun now on."

"Diff'ent—how?"

"No mo' lickin' to be sold heah—or drunk, either, fo' that matter."

Mr. Morse shook his round head sadly. "I seen that comin' the minute them crazy young bucks hurt Doc Morrison." He tried to find some solace in the situation. "But tourists ain't concerned about this thing, are they, Floyd?"

"I reckon not. Yo' business should go on bein' purty good."

The Sheriff lumbered upstairs to the corner suite which had been occupied by Kirk Reynolds; the suit in the living-room of which Dan Creedon still operated the dice-game.

Dan was seated by the window, in his shirt-sleeves. He was a tall, stony individual with sad, steady eyes and a laconic manner.

He said, "Howdy, Sheriff, and Floyd Griffin said, 'Howdy, Creedon.' Then he saw the other occupant of the room; the vivid brunette who stood near the window looking down upon Monument Square. The Sheriff said, 'Maw'nin', Miss Henkel."

"Git back! Ev'ry damned one of you!"

The Sheriff's eyes were blazing. He meant business, and they knew it. They backed against the wall. Barney and Jim and Andy stood in the center of the floor, battered and bruised and bleeding. One of the

Her voice was flat and tired. She said, "Good morning."

Floyd Griffin returned his attention to Dan Creedon.

"Doc Morrison is purty popular neahabouts."

"That's all I been hearing for three days."

"There's been meetin's an' things. The whole town is sad."

"Yeh? So what?"

The Sheriff gestured toward the adjoining room.

"That's through."

"The dice-game?"

"Uh-huh."

Creedon shrugged. "They'll get over it."

"Nope. Folks mean business this time." The guardian of law and order adged. "Nor neither that ain't all Creedon."

"What do you mean, that ain't all?"

"You got to get out of town."

"So? And suppose I don't?"

Floyd Griffin's eyes narrowed. "I know you ain't plumb foolish, Creedon. When they say to git out—why I reckon you got sense enough to do it."

"Sure. . . . but listen: if I close up the dice-game—"

"That ain't enough. Not wantin' to hurt yo' feelin's, Creedon—the town's kind of fed up with you. An' I'm tellin' you, man to man an' friendly-like, that it wouldn't be awful healthy for you to stay heah."

"I get you. How much time have I got?"

"Oh! three—fo' days. So long as folks know you're really fixin' to go, why I can keep 'em satisfied."

A faint smile flickered across Creedon's lips. He said, "Four days then, and I'll scam. Anything else?"

"Yeh. . . ."

The Sheriff looked more uncomfortable. He said, "It's about you, Miss Henkel."

Big black eyes flashed up to his. The lithe figure stiffened. She asked, "What about me?"

"You got to git out, too."

"Why?"

"Because ev'body says you got to. Now I ain't aimin' to make you feel bad, Miss Henkel—but folks has kind of stood all they're willin' to stand."

CHAPTER XIV

For perhaps five minutes after the departure of Sheriff Griffin, Babe Henkel said nothing more. Dan Creedon watched her—sympathetically. Eventually he spoke, and his voice was kindly. He said, "Snap out of it, Babe."

She turned smouldering eyes upon him. "The house!" she snapped.

"Griffin? You're crazy. He can't protect us any more because they wor' him thinkin' about that, Dan. I'm talkin' about running us out of town."

"Well. . . ."

She came closer and leaned over the table, her eyes boring into his. She said, "That's what you think."

"Sure I do."

"Well, you're wrong."

"Now listen, Babe."

"You listen to me. This town ain't gone suddenly moral. Things don't happen that way. It's a cover-up."

"For what?"

"For Barney Hamilton. They don't want to do anything to him, so they're getting rid of us."

Dan said, "Maybe. And what can we do about it?"

"Plenty."

"What, for instance?"

Babe was tense. She said, "Dan—you ain't gonna take this sittin' down, are you? You ain't willing to blow without anybody even having been punished for killing Kirk?"

He shook his head. "I don't like to if that's what you mean. But listen, Babe—me and you, we can't buck a whole town."

She said, "Barney Hamilton killed Kirk."

"I suppose he did. But everybody in town thinks he had good cause."

"Well, I don't. You see, I wasn't hard-boiled with Kirk. I was pretty crazy about him."

"Sure you were."

"If I had been bumped off, Kirk wouldn't have checked out without doing something about it, would he?"

"That's different."

"How?"

"You're a dame."

She placed her hands palms down on the table-top. The long, slender fingers with their crimson nails were trembling.

"Before I leave this burg," she announced, "the guy that killed Kirk is gonna get his."

Dan Creedon was worried. "Don't go getting yourself all worked up. The cards are stacked against you, Babe."

"Going yellow on me?"

"Answer that for yourself."

"I'm fixing to run out."

"I know when I'm beat."

"Well, I don't!" Her voice was hard. "You can blow whenever you get good and ready. Me—I'm gonna do something."

Creedon shrugged. "If that's the way you feel about it, cut me in."

Suddenly her eyes were filled with tears. "Gee, Dan! That's swell. But I don't want to get you in no jam."

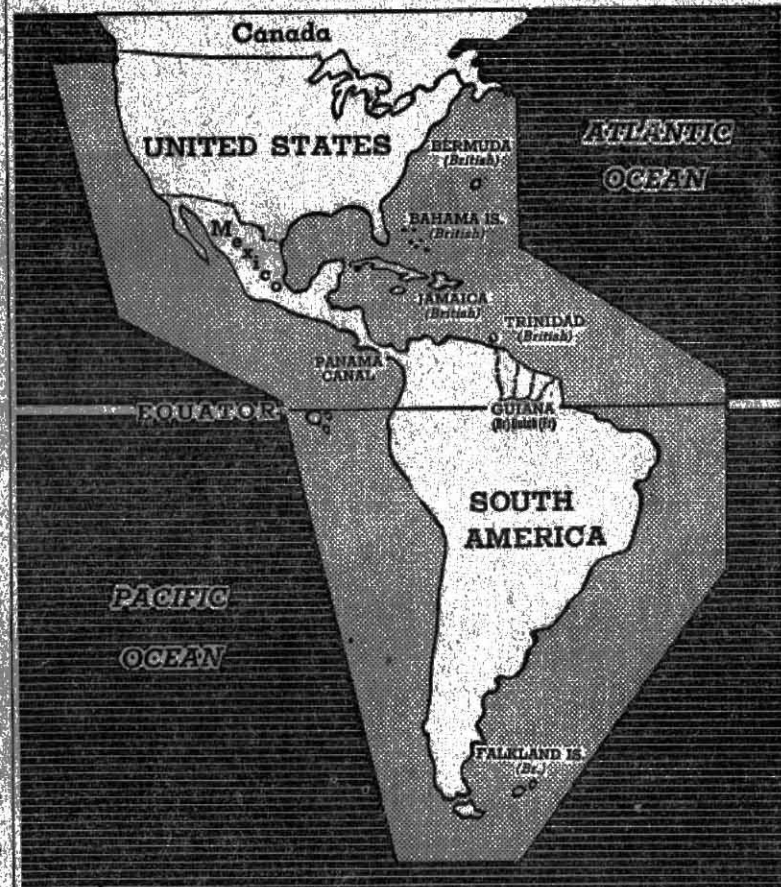

"I can take it."

"You mean you'll stick?"

"If you can sell me on an idea, yeh. And get this straight, it ain't that I think you're smart. You're crazy to step into any more trouble. But I never have run out on anybody and I don't figure to start now."

New 300-Mile Neutrality Zone Extends American 'Boundaries'

'Sovereignty of Seas' Problem Raised in Western Hemisphere.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

A 300-mile "neutrality zone" off the coasts of the Western Hemisphere, and President Roosevelt's statement that American territorial waters extend as far as American interests dictate, call attention to the age-old question of jurisdiction over the sea.

How far outward from its coasts any nation's sovereignty extends has been the subject of argument since a thousand years before the Christian era. In that period Minos, king of Crete, "made himself master of a great part of what is now termed the Hellenic sea," according to the Greek historian, Thucydides.

Today no nation claims absolute control under ordinary conditions, over any part of the sea more than a few miles from its coasts. Territorial waters of the United States extend out three miles from shore, while some other nations fix the limit as much as six miles out.

Adoption of Three-Mile Limit.

The three-mile limit was adopted by the United States and Great Britain toward the close of the Eighteenth century because it represented the maximum cannon range of those days. Today, however, the range of coast defense guns is 20 miles or more.

Although the three-mile limit is generally recognized as the boundary of United States territorial waters, there actually are several other "limits" in existence for special purposes. Treaties between the United States and other nations permit U. S. coast guard cutters to stop and search vessels suspected of smuggling at various distances.

Two little-known, but historic islands, Saare and Hiiuma, that guard the west coast of little Estonia, suddenly have leaped into news prominence with the Russian-Estonian agreement permitting Soviet forces to occupy the islands.

Saare and Hiiuma together are only half again as large as the tiny Duchy of Luxembourg, and practically unknown to the world at large; but these two low, flat islands are of tremendous strategic importance in the politically stormy Baltic sea.

Saare and Hiiuma are only a few score miles flying or steaming distance from any number of important Baltic points. They stand just south of the entrance to the Gulf of Finland, across which Tallinn, capital of Estonia, and Helsinki, capital of Finland, face each other only 50 miles apart.

Just 150 miles to the west across the Baltic is Sweden's capital, Stockholm. About 100 miles to the northwest are Finland's Aaland islands, which Finland and Sweden recently suggested should be fortified. The Aalands guard the entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia, the northward-stretching arm of the Baltic, between Sweden and Finland.

Both Saare and Hiiuma are flat, with deeply indented shores. Saare is 1,000 square miles in area, and Hiiuma about 360. Both have forests, interspersed with rough pasture and farm land. The highest point on Hiiuma is 223 feet, and on Saare only 88 above sea level. Saare somehow finds room for several lakes and small rivers within its narrow confines.

Meteorite Iron Fragments.

Several small craters on Saare, with fragments of meteoric iron scattered about, give evidence that sometime in the remote past several meteorites of considerable size fell from the sky upon this obscure corner of the world. Apparently the craters were formed when the fragments exploded upon striking the ground.

Saare's chief claim to fame consists of its therapeutic mud baths, which were patronized by the royal family of Russia in the old days of the czars. The mud, taken from the shallow seas off the coast, is reported to be radioactive and contains various ingredients declared to be helpful for rheumatism and other ailments.

The boy, who is a sophomore in Cullom High school, had just uncoupled the tractor from the plow and turned the tractor around when the governor spring broke, turning on the power full tilt, and causing the tractor to overturn. Willmer was caught under a rear wheel, the iron lug penetrating the flesh of his leg. He pulled himself loose, thereby probably aggravating the wound. He had presence of mind enough to shut off the tractor, which was still running, upside down.

Willmer was taken to the Roberts hospital, where the wound was dressed. Three stitches were taken in the muscle and six in the outside of the wound.

He came through the ordeal well, and is reported improving nicely.

Lesson for December 3

SPREADING THE GOOD NEWS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 10:24-33.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let him that hears say, Come.—Revelation 22:17.

"Bewilderment." That is the word which the president of a great American university recently said accurately described the present condition of the minds of men. Little wonder that the men of the world are bewildered, for they are like mariners who sail an unknown sea after having thrown away map and compass. Without Christ and without God's Word men cannot be anything but bewildered.

That which gives us even greater concern is that many who are Christians, who really know the Guide and who have the Guidebook, are also declaring themselves to be utterly bewildered. What is the reason? Obviously that they have not read the Book and have not talked with their Lord.

Our lesson for the coming Lord's Day touches on one of the problems which causes many Christians to question God's love and care. They find that their efforts to testify for Him by word or life meet with a violent reaction from a bitter world, and they discover that such a life involves personal sacrifice and frequently results in even the members of their own families turning against them. Can this be God's way of dealing with His people? The answer is found in His Word. The Christian is to be

I. Fearless in a Hostile World (vv. 24-28, 32, 33).

Note carefully that he is not to be silent (vv. 32, 33). We deny our Lord when we fail to speak for Him when we ought to do so. Christianity is not something to be hidden in one's own bosom, a fire to warm one's own soul. It is good news which is to be proclaimed even from the housetops.

But, someone will say, when I do speak there is opposition; they call me names, they threaten to kill me. Yes, and what of it? The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his Lord (v. 24). They called Jesus a devil. They even crucified Him. Should we then expect to be borne to glory on flowery beds of ease? God knows all about this, yes, even about the hidden and whispered plottings of evil men (v. 20). He will deal with them and judge them in due season.

We need not fear men. The most they can do is to kill the body. Let us consider the eternal God, who not only may take the life out of the body, but is also able to cast both soul and body into hell (v. 28). God is not as a theory, a bit of pious imagination. He is real. He is all-powerful. Why then should we be fearful if we serve Him in faithful devotion?

II. Fearless in Personal Life (vv. 20-31).

It is one thing to be bold in the midst of battle. It is quite another thing to be fearless in the quiet of one's own room, or of one's own heart. Satan is expert at that point. He comes to us with his humiliating accusations of our unworthiness, yes, of our worthlessness. Sadly enough our own knowledge of ourselves confirms his dismal judgment.

But wait! If we are Christians we are not our own. We are bought with a price, the precious blood of Christ. We belong to Him. He is our advocate with the Father. Let Him meet our accuser. What does He say? He tells us that He has numbered the very hairs of our head (v. 30), that even a dying sparrow concerns Him, and that we are worth more than many sparrows (v. 31). We are His and He is our Saviour, Friend and Brother. Let us look up and be without fear.

III. Fearless in the Family Circle (vv. 34-39).

Here, after all, is the acid test of discipleship.

Christ did not come in order to stir up needless strife between members of the family, but He well knew that divisions would come as the result of true discipleship. Men who are ordinarily kind and cultured in their dealings with their friends and families but who do not know Christ, can become like veritable demons against any one in that circle who hears the call of Christ and follows Him.

No human tie, no matter how intimate or precious, is to be permitted to stand between the individual and his devotion to Christ. If it does, Christ is evidently no longer first. He is no longer Lord of all in the life, and if He is not Lord of all, He is not Lord at all.

While it seems almost paradoxical to say it, Scripture teaches and experience demonstrates that if you keep your life for yourself and your own interests, it will die in your very hands and you will lose it. If you give your life in glad abandonment to God, on the other hand, you will receive it back from Him transformed, enriched, and glorified by His grace and blessing.

Gwen Took the Words Right Out of His Mouth

The dashing young traveler with the lady-killer reputation seated himself at the table and put on his most seductive smile as the pretty waitress approached him.

"Nice day, little girl," he said. "It is," she replied. "And so was yesterday, and my name is Gwen, and I'm pretty, and have lovely blue eyes, and I've been here quite a long time, and it's not a bad place, and I'm not too nice a girl to be working here, and my brother is cook in this place, and was once a professional boxer. Now, what is your order—roast beef, roast lamb, stew, or liver and bacon?"

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and cure it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull, headache days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention?"

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the better way is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it every day—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek, Sold by every grocer.

SPAGHETTI WITH CHIPPED BEEF
(Recipes Below)

Old Fashioned Hospitality

With Thanksgiving back of us and winter ahead perhaps this is an excellent time to ask ourselves some searching questions—to be answered just by ourselves.

Do we as homemakers really enjoy neighbors and friends? As they pass our house on our street do they think of us with a friendly warmth? Or have we, perhaps unknowingly, allowed ourselves to be so busy, so concerned about the tasks of the day that we have forgotten that after all the biggest joy in living comes because it is the privilege of each one to "live in my house by the side of the road and be a friend to man."

Let's entertain then, but let's entertain simply, informally, inexpensively. And thinking that you might like to do just this, I have collected for you this week a number of my favorite recipes for just such easy entertaining. Please note the little hints that are attached to each of the recipes.

Spaghetti With Chipped Beef

(Serves 4)

This recipe is particularly nice for a one-dish meal when guests arrive unexpectedly.

1 large (24-ounce) can cooked spaghetti in tomato sauce
1 5-ounce jar chipped beef
1 cup fat, melted and brown.

Heat the spaghetti in a border around the platter and pour the spaghetti in the center. Garnish with parsley or watercress.

Oven Fried Chicken

(Serves 4)

Oven fried chicken is one of the dishes that is particularly simple to prepare. After the preliminary browning, all that remains to be done is simply to put the chicken in the oven where it takes care of itself and cooks beautifully until you are ready to serve it.

1 2 or 3 pound chicken, cut for frying
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
1/4 cup water
1 cup fine cracker crumbs
Fat for frying
1 onion, chopped fine
1 cup cream

Dip pieces of chicken in flour to which salt and pepper have been added; then dip in beaten egg to which water has been added and finally roll in cracker crumbs. Brown in hot fat (1 inch in depth). Place in baking pan, sprinkle with onion, and top with cream. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until tender, approximately 1 1/2 hours.

Baked Stuffed Pork Chops

These baked stuffed pork chops are a favorite with any man. Try them.

Purchase thick pork chops and cut a slit in them from the fat side of the chop through to the bone. Spread inside surface of chop with prepared mustard and fill with any desired bread dressing. Brown lightly in hot fat in a frying pan. move to greased baking pan. bake slowly in a moderate oven, 30 degrees, for approximately 2 hours, or until meat is tender.

Hasty Oven Baked Beans

(Serves 6)

And as for baked beans—try this 30-minute method and if you don't confess, I defy the guests to guess that they are not home baked beans.

1 large can baked beans
1/4 pound bacon
1/4 cup light brown sugar
2 tablespoons tomato catsup
Pour 1/4 can of baked beans into greased baking casserole. Dice 2 or 3 slices bacon and sprinkle over the beans. Add catsup, and then cover with remainder of baked beans. Sprinkle with brown sugar, and top with bacon strips. Bake in hot oven, (400 degrees) for 30 minutes. Serve at once.

Escalloped Potatoes and Ham

Guests or no guests this escalloped potatoes and ham dish is deliciously simple and simply delicious.

Slice potatoes very thin and place layer by layer in a buttered baking casserole. Dot each layer with butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Add milk, sufficient in quantity to just cover the potatoes. Top with a one-inch slice of ham. Bake in a slow oven, (325 degrees) until both the ham and the potatoes are baked to a stage of perfect doneness, approximately 1 hour and 15 minutes.

My Best Chocolate Cake

All the world loves a chocolate cake and I suppose there are almost as many recipes for chocolate cake as there are women who make them. This recipe, however, remains my favorite.

2 ounces bitter chocolate

1/2 cup butter

1 1/2 cups sugar

3 eggs

2 1/2 cups cake flour

1/4 teaspoon salt

2 teaspoons baking powder

1 cup milk

Melt chocolate in barely over water. Cream butter thoroughly and add sugar slowly. Separate eggs, beat egg yolks, and add to butter and sugar mixture. Add the melted chocolate.

Mix and sift together the flour, salt, and baking powder and add alternately with the milk and vanilla extract. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into the cake mixture. Place in 2 well-greased, 8-inch layer cake pans. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately 30 to 35 minutes.

Chocolate Cream Pie

And speaking of chocolate—this chocolate cream pie has that just right combination of ingredients that makes it neither too thick nor too thin; too sweet nor not sweet enough. Furthermore, it is just as great a favorite with men as with women; with boys as with girls.

2 1-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate
2 cups milk
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup cornstarch
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 baked pastry shell

Shave the chocolate and place it together with 1 1/2 cups milk in top of double boiler; heat until chocolate is melted. Mix the sugar, cornstarch, and salt with the remaining 1/2 cup milk, and to it add the melted chocolate mixture. Return to double boiler and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Then beat the egg yolks slightly and slowly pour the chocolate mixture over them. Return to double boiler and cook 2 minutes longer. Add vanilla extract and pour in baked pastry shell. Cool, and top with whipped cream to serve.

Byrd's 'Penguin Special' to Get Antarctic Workout

Diagrammed here is the $150,000 snow cruiser designed by Dr. Thomas Poulter at Chicago's Armour Institute for Admiral Richard E. Byrd's exploration trip to the Antarctic. It averages 10 miles an hour, and in its 27-ton body carries enough fuel for a non-stop New York-San Francisco trip and back. It carries a plane on its back. Each wheel has a separate motor and tires are changed by raising the axle internally, letting the body rest on the snow.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WITH the holidays almost at hand everyone seems to be giving curtains a thought. An enthusiastic reader of Sewing Book No. 3 writes, "I have a bay window in my dining room that has always been a problem to curtain. Right now I would like to make pinch pleated drapes of figured damask to hang from cranes to the floor. I would also like a valance." With this letter all the window dimensions were given.

The sketch at the lower right reveals the difficulty. The space between the top of the windows and the top of the bay made it impossible to hang the draperies as desired. A 1 by 2-inch strip of wood nailed next to the ceiling of the bay and extending 6 inches over the walls at the sides as illustrated will solve the problem. The cranes for the side drapes may be screwed to this strip, and the rods for the pinch pleated valance fastened to it. The rods for the glass curtains may then be attached in the usual way to the tops of the window frames.

NOTE: Readers who are now using Sewing Books No. 1, 2 and 3 will be happy to learn that No. 4 is ready for mailing; as well as the 10 cent editions of No. 1, 2 and 3.

RETORTS—

Our esteemed contemporary, "Toby," of Cullom Chronicle has been busily engaged, of late, in casting aspersions, making veiled insinuation and hurling allegations concerning the probity or lack of probity of your scribe in all matters relating to cats. "Toby" has also recruited the assistance of his veteran sports editor, Ed Ginter, in the matter of casting some of the above mentioned aspersions, but when it comes to the business of aspersing casting we think Mr. Ginter works better with a dry fly. Personally we prefer the hurling of allegations. A good ripe allegation makes a bigger, juicier splash when it hits.

There are many reasons why this paper has been devoid of news about our cats in recent months. The main one is that an account of Cleopatra's activities for the past twelve months would read like Chronicles in the Bible—full of begats. This sort of thing gets monotonous. Margaret Santer should hear about it. As for the cat at the head of this column, the feline models who posed for this portrait had just dined on a brace of Cullom rats.

As for Mr. Ginter, we know that he will be interested in the news that Langham Creek simply abounds with Persian catfish. They make a peculiar sound—something between a purr and a belch. Nobody knows what they're good for.

(Aside to Mr. Ginter: This may be a little out of your line, but can you tell us if there are any

DEATH OF FORMER CULLOM MAN, E. M. CROSTEN, IS NOTED

BUSINESS MAN OF EARLY
1900'S DIED IN MINNESOTA
LAST MONTH

We are indebted to Mrs. J. W. Crum, of Pontiac, for the clipping from a Mankato, Minnesota, paper of October 9th, published here, concerning the death of E. M. ("Eddie") Crosten.

Mr. Crosten was in the drug business in Cullom many years ago in the building now occupied as a dwelling by the John Wise family, and was later in the implement business in the building now occupied by The Chronicle-Headlight. At one time he owned the McCaughey farm. He was known to many Cullom people.

He left Cullom some thirty or more years ago, probably going to Mankato to locate shortly afterward. The eccentricities mentioned in the Minnesota paper's article were manifested by Mr. Crosten during his residence here. Mrs. Crum states that Mr. Crosten had bought a ticket for California on the morning of his death and had expected to leave Mankato that evening.

Paper Tells Story.

The clipping, headed "Long-Bearded Recluse Found Dead," follows:

Everett M. Crosten, 76, commonly known as "Pete" on the Northside where the small man with his long beard and crutches was a familiar sight, was found dead Saturday afternoon outside the hut at 210 Tyler avenue where he had lived the life of a recluse in the midst of few comforts and a crowded accumulation of the odds and ends which made up his personal possessions.

His death was attributed to coronary thrombosis by Dr. E. G. Olmanson, Nicollet county coroner, who was called immediately after the body was found reclining on a cot in his yard. The discovery was made by children playing in the vicinity. Dr. Olmanson said that death occurred about an hour before the body was found. Crosten was seen on a North Mankato street at noon Saturday, headed home in a taxi cab.

Efforts over the week end to locate relatives revealed distant connections in New York, who will not be here for the funeral. A sister, with whom he spent winters in Florida for several years, died three years ago.

The funeral, which will be in charge of friends, will be held on Tuesday afternoon at the Landkamer funeral home. Burial will be in the Glenwood cemetery.

The eccentricities of Crosten's appearance—his long gray beard, which provoked the title of "Santa Claus" among children, his small stature, his haphazard mode of dress—and his eccentric way of life, were familiar to scores here, as well as to his limited circle of acquaintances and friends.

But during his 30 years of residence here, little was ever learned of his background and of his life before he came here, beyond the fact that he once worked for an implement company. It was not known whether he ever married.

Cycled Through Europe.

During his younger days he toured Europe by bicycle, according to recollections he had occasionally related since coming here. He prided himself on never missing a World's Fair and during the past spring was in San Francisco for the opening of the Golden Gate exposition. He visited the last Chicago fair and in an earlier day, the World's Fair at St. Louis.

B. Frank Pay, numbered among the few friends of the recluse, was requested to act as special administrator of his estate in a paper left by Crosten. The paper was found in a strong box, discovered among the dead man's effects, and opened before the Nicollet county judge of probate at St. Peter.

Crosten owned some real estate on the Northside at the time of his death. Some of his property was acquired by the City of North Mankato when it was sold for delinquent taxes a few years ago.

The extent of his other possessions was not fully known today, although Pay said that the estate probably includes little of value.

Twelve chickens, numerous odds and ends which crowded the hut and left little room for living quarters, were found among the man's possessions when his home was opened by friends who have taken charge of the funeral and burial arrangements. The hut was not wired for electric lights, although he had lived in it for years.

persimmon or paw-paw trees in this part of the state?—Clifton Advocate.

Although a recluse in the sense of living apart from those around him and of seldom entering the homes of others, Crosten was "social" in the sense of being amiable and ready to pass the time in conversation with those he encountered in his expeditions to downtown North Mankato and Mankato and with the few who occasionally visited him at his hut. Newspapers, religious tracts and other published matter which came to his hands provided his reading which was one of his few pastimes and occupations. Small scale farming and the rental of property were his only apparent means of livelihood.

For years he has spent part of the winter in Florida or California. Seven years ago, in 1932, his toes were amputated after being frozen while he was tending livestock at his place during extreme cold weather. Since that time he had walked with crutches.

He was a member of the Methodist church and a member of the Odd Fellows lodge during his early years.

SEARCY ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY FOR GOVERNOR

Palmyra, Ill., Nov. 29.—With "experience as a bedrock," and citing "twenty-five years of close association with Illinois public problems as a background," State Senator Earl B. Searcy, of Springfield, in a mass meeting here tonight, announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor in the primary of next April 9.

Searcy chose this village as the scene for his announcement because he was born here. Lifelong family friends mingled with delegations from a dozen counties. Macoupin county Republican Chairman Ralph Hayes, of Bunker Hill, presided. Tensely, and in candid fashion for which the Senator is noted, Searcy sketched the Illinois picture in skeleton form, promising ample amplification of issues during the "constructive though frank campaign" that will follow.
